2 Italian Battleships Set Afire, Cruiser Sunk By Allied Planes

THIRD GREAT CLASH IN PACIFIC

Sea-Air Battle Being Waged Off Aleutians

By SANDOR S. KLEIN

WASHINGTON, June 16. — (BUP) — A third great naval-air battle in the Pacific within six weeks is in progress today off the Aleutian islands.

Allied airmen—both army and navy—already have damaged at least six Japanese vessels, maybe seven, and sunk another. One of the damaged vessels was an aircraft carrier.

The battle apparently has been going on intermittently since Japanese bombers attacked the naval base at Dutch Harbor on June 3. Admiral Ernest J. King said on June 7 that a battle was going on in that area but that the situation was obscure. Last week the Japanese landed on one of the Aleutian islands.

Only Fragmentary Reports Given

Only fragmentary reports on the Aleutian area have been released and they are confused now by different versions by the U. S. army and navy of the damage inflicted on the enemy.

The navy version—army and navy airmen have damaged at least three cruisers, one destroyer, one gunboat and one transport, "some of them severely".

The army version—Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, air corps chief, said in a telegram to the Glenn L. Martin Co., aircraft manufacturers, that army medium bombers attacked the Japanese task force in the Aleutians three times, sinking a cruiser and scoring three torpedo hits on an aircraft carrier.

REPORTS CONFUSED

There was no attempt as yet by either the army or navy to reconcile these two versions, but a navy spokesman, commenting on Arnold's message, said the full extent of the navy department's "accurate information" to this time was contained in its communique. There was a possibility that the sunken cruiser Arnold referred to was one of those reported damaged by the navy.

Despite the confusion and lack of information, these things stand out in a recapitulation of official statements on the Aleutian action:

There has been no specific mention to date of any surface vessels in the Aleutian area; all action reported thus far has been by aircraft.

The Japanese force in the north Pacific is a big one—probably far greater than the public has been given reason to suspect. It was recalled that Admiral King recently said that the Japanese were not in the habit of sending a "boy on a man's job."

GREAT IMPORTANCE

There is every indication that the Aleutian battle has or will develop into an engagement comparable—in importance if not in size—to those that preceded it, first in the Coral sea and later off Midway, and officials here are hoping that it will end as disastrously for the Japanese.

The battle of Midway was a sequel of the Coral Sea battle. The thrust at Alaska and the Aleutian Islands obviously was planned by the enemy to parallel its attempt to capture Midway.

The U.S. navy's communique last night was the first official word of the Aleutians engagement since it announced last Friday that the Japanese had landed on Attu and had ships in the harbor at Kiska — both in the Aleutians. Last night's communique made no mention of the enemy forces that have landed on the islands, indicating that they were still there.

"North Pacific area:

"1. The army and navy are continuing air attacks against the Japanese forces which recently were reported to have landed on western islands of the Aleutian group.

"2. Foul weather and fog, characteristic of this locality at all seasons, are hampering our reconnaissance and attack operations, but reports to date indicate that at least three cruisers, one destroyer, one gunboat and one transport have been damaged, some of them severely.

"3. Except for these continuing air attacks upon the enemy landing parties and their supporting naval contingents, the general situation in the Aleutian islands appears unchanged."

Today's War Moves

A revolutionary change in methods of naval warfare is being wrought as the battle of the Pacific proceeds over the vast stretches of the world's largest ocean.

The navy of the future will be far different from the navy of the past and it will operate in a far different way from the navies that fought at Jutland, or even in the earlier stages of this war. New methods are being developed in the Pacific, and the experience gained there will shape the groundwork pattern of the future.

Russians Balk Three-Day Nazi Kharkov Drive

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

MOSCOW, June 16—(AP)—A three-day German assault in an attempt to cross an important river in the Kharkov sector has been balked by Russian hill-top defences and the Nazis now have been forced back to the defensive, front-line Soviet dispatches declared today.

(The Germans claimed they had expanded a bridgehead which they won across the Donets river in the Kharkov area yesterday.)

Around Sevastopol, the other major scene of current fighting on the eastern front, the Germans have massed seven artillery regiments on their main line of assault in an effort to batter down the Russian fortifications of that besieged Crimean city, the Russians said.

REDS HOLDING FIRM

The German cannon include one of the big Berthas such as those with which the Kaiser's troops shelled Paris during the First Great War, the dispatches said but, despite the weight of artillery, the Red army forces are holding firmly to their rockbound positions.

Tass, Soviet news agency, said the Germans were using at least seven infantry divisions and more than 150 tanks against Sevastopol in addition to the artillery.

In repulsing the repeated heavy German assaults, the agency said, the Sevastopol garrison in a single day destroyed 40 tanks and killed the major part of three regiments of infantry, while Soviet planes burned 10 tanks, knocked out 4 more and smashed 13 trucks loaded with infantry.

HUTCHISON SAYS:

Higher Taxes, More Rationing In Prospect For Americans

This is the tenth in a series by Mr. Hutchison, who has been in Washington surveying the American war scene.—EDITOR.

By BRUCE HUTCHISON
Vancouver Sun Political Writer

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 16.—The American people have hardly begun to grasp the size and the impact of the process now under way among them. To the economist it is a vast economic upheaval from which there can never be a complete return. To the industrialist it is the largest industrial project ever attempted. To the reformer it is a chance for a better world after the war. To the rich man it is the prospect of losing his old power and privilege. But what is the immediate effect of all this on the ordinary American?

That is what the ordinary American wants to know in the whirling chaos of these times. The answer is equally interesting to the ordinary Canadian, since conditions will be roughly similar on both sides of the border.

The answer cannot be complete for the obvious reason that no one knows the lengths or the requirements of the war. But to get an approximate answer it is necessary to understand generally the scope of the United States' war program. What is the world's most powerful nation trying to do?

In brief, it is trying to build

SEES "NO" MAJORITY

Conscription Unnecessary To Meet Present Needs Of Army, Gardiner Tells House

OTTAWA, June 16.—(CP)—Agriculture Minister Gardiner told the House of Commons yesterday that he believed Canada's "present policy in relation to the army" providing for 750,000 men, could be carried out without conscription.

Mr. Gardiner likened Conservative House Leader Hanson's announced policy for total national selective service to the "Bismarckian policy" which, he said, produced "the modern Hun of today."

He agreed with Hanson that only a national government could put such a policy into effect—"A government with no political past and no desire to have a political future," and added:

ONE CONDITION

"There is only one condition under which responsible party government in Canada would bring in conscription.

"That would be a condition under which, if they did not do so, the democratic institution of government would be threatened with destruction.

"Under those conditions probably there is not a man in the house who would not support a government in that direction."

Mr. Gardiner declared his belief, however, that the great majority, if not all members on the government side of the house, and many

Reserve Army Conscription Is Said Possible

MONTREAL, June 16—(AP)—Defence Minister Ralston told a joint meeting of service clubs here today that "if the reserve army is not recruited we will have to see to it that the men are put into training and are provided to support this very important job."

He told the Montreal reserve army week rally that people had told him that training for the reserve army should be intensified.

"Well, I want to say right now that there is no political or administrative reason why that should not be done quickly. I don't want to do that if we can help it . . . More than that, compulsory training is just a negation of the whole spirit of the reserve army."

MENACED ON TWO SIDES

Col. Ralston said the Canadian army should be considered a "National army menaced on two sides."

The army and its many different schools teaches citizenship, leadership, trades for both war and peace, neatness, self-dependence, initiative, resourcefulness, responsibility to others, he said.

Canada is now menaced on both the east and west coasts, said Col. Ralston.

"There are submarine sinkings daily off our eastern coast and the mouth of the St. Lawrence has had its visitation from these skulking, murderous craft.

"On the Pacific coast the daring tactics of Pearl Harbor might be repeated and the week-end brought the news that the Japs have set foot on the far end of the bridge which connects Asia and North America.

CALLING FOR ACTION

The people are calling for action and so are the Canadian troops in Britain, now more than 140,000 strong, they have been a factor in deterring Hitler from an invasion of Britain and their time will come.

"The army overseas is growing constantly," he said. "Gen. McNaughton, (Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton), as army commander is relentlessly driving towards the day of the assault."

From January to May more than 82,000 of the 173,000 to 193,000 men it was estimated would be required for general service

Plans Survey Of All Routes Toward Alaska

To investigate the feasibility of all air, rail and highway routes from the United States to Alaska through Canada, Frederic A. Delano, Washington, chairman, National Resources Planning Board, arrived in Edmonton Tuesday morning on his way to British Columbia and Alaska.

He is an uncle of Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States.

Accompanied by Col. R. F. Bessey, Portland, and J. C. Rettie, Juneau, Alaska, Mr. Delano will confer with provincial government highway officials here, and also with executives of the railway companies. A former railroad executive Mr. Delano is no stranger to western Canada, having made three trips here, two over the C.P.R. and one over the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Mr. Delano emphasized that he was not his purpose to designate any particular route, and added that in newspaper interviews at other Canadian cities he had been mis-reported. He said the purpose of his visit was to make a personal survey of feasible routes and report on them.

FUTURE DEVELOPMENTS

He said that the future development of Alaska nd the North West Territories was linked with his

Marine Building In Paris Shelled By British Plane

LONDON, June 16. — (CP) — The Air Ministry announced today that a British plane dropped two French tricolor flags on Paris last night and attacked the former Ministry of War with cannon fire. One flag was dropped over the Arc De Triomphe, and the second in the Place De La Concord.

The Marine Ministry building now is used by the German naval authorities. The attack was carried out by a Beaufighter of the coastal command, with a crew of two, a flight lieutenant and a sergeant.

in the army up to March 31, 1943, had enlisted.

"Speaking of voluntary enlistment generally," he said, "I wonder if it is realized that the total Canadian casualties in this war in the three services, that is those killed, missing, prisoners of war and wounded, have been about 5,600 as compared with over 58,000 at this time in the last war and I think you will agree that it is a worthy achievement that, without spur of heavy casualties, over 450,000 young men have responded voluntarily and are in the service today."

Backs Government

J. M. Dechene, French-Canadian Liberal member of the House of Commons from Athabasca, who yesterday declared that he would support the government on the conscription issue because he had been elected as a supporter of the King government.

Athabasca M.P. Lauds Work Of Men In Cabinet

OTTAWA, June 16.—(CP)—J. M. Dechene (Lib., Athabaska) told the House of Commons yesterday that the lot of cabinet ministers was not a happy one.

Men as able as the country could boast were sitting on the treasury benches and were receiving small salaries compared to what they could earn elsewhere. Some were sacrificing their health, and some had even given their lives for their country.

"When you and I go home at 11 o'clock and take things a little more easily, these men do not know family life," he said.

"They are working until the small hours of the morning, passing orders-in-council. Approving contracts, doing many other things, back again at sunrise, carrying on 18 or 19 hours a day, and what do they get? Criticism, of the bitterest and most unfair kind.

HARD TASKMASTER

"Hitler was not altogether wrong in his estimate of the sort of democracies we have in the world today. He knew how unfair a democracy can be. He knew how hard a taskmaster politics can be."

Mr. Dechene said Canada did not fear Hitler and could "lick him" provided it took care of its own leaders, provided Canadians acted fairly, no matter what political opinions they held, towards the men "who are sacrificing the best years of their lives and sometimes life itself.

"It will not be surprising to learn of other ministers breaking under the tremendous ordeal of administering this terrific business," he added.

Mr. Dechene, a French-speaking western member, announced that he would support the government's policy, having been elected as a supporter of the King government.

Mr. Dechene said the past should be forgotten and Canadians should think of the present and the future.

"Let's walk up the hill, let's walk up our Calvary together knowing a new world lies ahead."

DROP FRENCH BARRIER

The French-Canadian boy inclined to get into military affairs had not been able to do so since 1939 because he could not enter a military collge or quality for the militia. When the war came there was a shortage of French-Canadian officers and he congratulated Defence Minister Ralston on arranging for French-Canadians to receive training.

In his riding, young men of French-Canadian race had all enlisted when they were of military age, but their duty was easier than that of the boys of Quebec because they spoke English fluently.

United States Army's Air Corps Co-Operates With British Bombers

By SIDNEY J. WILLIAMS

LONDON, June 16.—(BUP——A big British convoy has reached Malta and Tobruk with supplies after escaping from "very heavy attacks" by superior Axis naval and air forces in a Mediterranean battle in which units of the American Army Air Corps participated, it was announced tonight.

The British warships and United States and R.A.F. planes protecting the convoy, set fire to two Italian battleships, sank a 10,000-ton cruiser of the Trento class and at least two enemy destroyers, it was stated in a joint Admiralty and Air Ministry communique.

"Heavy losses have been imposed upon the enemy air forces," the communique said.

Enemy Claims Without Foundation

The communique said:

"The fantastic enemy claims of having sunk cruisers, and damaged a battleship and an aircraft carrier are without any foundation."

The convoy, running the gauntlet of attacks in the central Mediterranean with support of U. S. and British planes, was said to have delivered supplies to Malta and the besieged stronghold of Tobruk on the Libyan coast "in the face of very heavy attacks by superior enemy air and naval forces."

Although the Axis claims of the sinking or damaging of between 20 and 30 British warships and merchantmen were described as "fantastic," the communique said that "the operations were not completed without loss."

ITALY ADMITS LOSSES

The Italians had acknowledged the loss of three Italian warships sunk or damaged, including a heavy cruiser, and it was said in Axis broadcasts that "United States warships probably participated" in the battle.

Tonight's British communique, issued after more than 24 hours of silence by the admiralty while the Axis radios made victory claims, did not mention American warships being involved in the battle and spoke only of United States Army Air Corps units.

Advices from Cairo said that probably six Italian warships were sunk or damaged in the great four-day naval and air battle.

The Axis broadcasts said that two Allied convoys had been broken up by the attacks and that both were forced to turn back.

Tonight's communique, nailing this report and the Axis claiming of 20 to 30 Allied ships sunk or damaged, said that the ships had gone

By-Election Date Mooted In Edmonton

While no official announcement has been made by the provincial government with respect to the forthcoming provincial by-election, it is believed in some political circles that the by-election may be held some time during the month Sept. 15 to Oct. 15.

It was reported some time ago it was expected the vote would be taken some time during the fall to fill the vacant seat in the Alberta legislature created by the death of D. M. Duggan, M.L.A., Independent Edmonton.

The Independent and C.C.F. groups have indicated they will place candidates in the field. The C.C.F. will meet here Tuesday night (tonight) to decide the date of a nominating convention.

INDEPENDENTS ACTIVE

Last week the Independent Citizens' association of Alberta named an executive committee of 11 members which is the nucleus of an Edmonton constituency branch of the provincial association.

This committee, which has power to add to its number, was instructed to elect a slate of officers and also to make arrangements for a nominating convention.

A report that Social Credit and C.C.F. supporters might negotiate for a joint candidate for the by-election was denied in both political camps Tuesday.

A Social Credit official said it appeared certain that the C.C.F. would nominate its own candidate. "We have heard nothing about any negotiating committee and have not taken any action in connection with the by-election," he stated.

Threatens Official: Gets Year In Jail

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

VEGREVILLE, June 16.—John Lyahchyahyn, of Musidora was found guilty Monday in Vegreville supreme court, of sending a threatening letter to Joseph Melsaac, Edmonton registrar for the National War Service, and was sentenced to one year in jail. The presiding judge was Mr. Justice T. M. Tweedie.

"Officers administering the national defence act are not to be harassed or embarrassed by any threat which anyone sees fit to make," Mr. Justice Tweedie said. "You are all living in this country and you will do your duty under the National Defence Act and you will obey the law of this country. If you don't you will get the punishment which you deserve.

"We need all the young men that we can get. And if you do not feel it is your duty to serve and defend the country in which you are living and in which you have freedom, probably ways will be found to see that you do your duty. This applies to all and not the accused alone."

PROMISES WORLD-WIDE REACTION

Gandhi To Launch New Drive On Britain's India Rule

Priest-Politician Cloaks Plans-To-Be With Secrecy: Troubled By Congress Aid

By PRESTON GROVER

WARDHA, India, June 16.—(AP)—Mohandas K. Gandhi, again the little priest-politician, declared yesterday he soon will launch a movement against British rule in India that "will be felt by the whole world".

He made the statement in an interview here but declined to outline the nature of the proposed movement although I raised the question several times.

As the interview progressed for upward of an hour, the impression was forced upon me that he himself is undetermined on the nature of the movement-to-be.

Further, it was evident he is troubled about the extent to which he would be supported by the important All-India Congress, one of the principal aids in his long fight for India's full independence.

WANTS RESULTS NOW

But while he was both mysterious and mystical in discussing the new movement, Gandhi reiterated he is not waiting until the war ends but wants a crisis now.

He said that if freedom for India were granted by Britain, he would be willing to have British and United States forces remain in India to fight the Japanese.

Asked what would be the next move in event that a freedom demand were rejected—something he agreed is by far the greatest likelihood—he replied:

"It will be a move which will be felt by the whole world.

"It may not interfere with the movement of British troops but it is sure to engage British attention. . . .

"India free and independent will play a prominent part in defending China. Today I do not think she is rendering any real help to China. We have followed a non-embarrassment policy so far. We will follow it even now but we cannot allow the British government to exploit it."

TOYED WITH TOWEL

Throughout the interview Gandhi toyed with a wet towel on his head. He threw it constantly to keep cool. He wore little else, save a twist of white sheeting about the loins. He sat cross-legged mat, his back resting against a roll like a padded hotwater tank.

Gandhi claimed he had been misinterpreted on statements that he wanted British and American forces to quit India at once. He insisted such an interpretation come from extracting sentences from their context.

If Britain granted India freedom, he said, the country would welcome British and American troops "as allies" against Japan.

Plans Survey Of All Routes Toward Alaska

present survey, and added that it was his personal opinion that Canada and the United States should develop a co-operative plan for this development.

A report on probable sea, air, rail and highway routes to Alaska was included in a report of the National Resources Planning Board about five years ago, Mr. Delano stated, and the present trip was to bring that survey up-to-date in the light of the great amount of survey work that has been carried on this year.

MORE INFORMATION

He added that the surveys conducted during 1942 had added more information of the topography of the country than had been achieved during the past 12 years.

Mr. Delano said, that while he was not in a position to make any statement of policy, it would appear a logical thing that more than one overland route would be built to Alaska, and also that east and west connecting links should be created also.

Whether that route would be a railway, a highway or further airlines was a matter of policy to be determined by the engineers and other advisors, he added.

U.S. OFFICIALS VISIT GOVERNMENT

Information on all probable routes in connection with the construction of the Alaska highway was sought by Frederic A. Delano, Washington, D.C., chairman of the National Resources Planning Board, and his party when they visited provincial government officials Tuesday morning, it was reported at noon Tuesday.

Mr. Delano visited His Honor Lieut. Gov. John C. Bowen, Premier William Aberhart and Hon. W. A. Fallow, provincial minister of public works. He was accompanied by Col. R. F. Bessey, Portland, Ore; J. C. Bettie, Juneau, Alaska; Maj. L. Brown, chief engineer for the U.S. Public Roads Administration with headquarters in Edmonton; and John Randolph, U.S. consul in Edmonton.

COURTESY CALLS

The U.S. government officials' visits to the lieutenant-governor and premier were in the nature of courtesy calls.

Mr. Fallow said Mr. Delano was anxious to obtain a number of maps of the north country from the department of public works. He also sought information on all probable routes to Alaska, along with the advantages and disadvantages of each.

The minister said the provincial government would co-operate as much as possible with the U.S. officials in connection with their Alaska highway plans. The department of public works is preparing a number of maps to assist the U.S. government in its road project.

Mr. Delano and his party also visited the provincial publicity branch to obtain a variety of information about the north country.

Conscription Is Unnecessary At Present Time in the opposition, would vote "no" against a policy of "immediately" calling men for service overseas.

Mr. Gardiner was the first speaker when the house yesterday resumed debate on Prime Minister Mackenzie King's motion for second reading of his bill to amend the National Resources Mobilization Act.

He was followed by John Diefenbaker (Con. Lake Centre) who said that the minister was "consistent" in his opposition to conscription for overseas service.

NO PRACTICAL FUTURE

Mr. Diefenbaker said the minister had declared, in effect, that: "Regardless of conditions, however dangerous our situation as a country and an empire may be, any party government which today would bring in military service for overseas would have no regard for the political future of that party."

"Surely that is a dangerous attitude to be taken by a minister charged with the aspirations of the people and their right to survival!

"He said: 'I stand where I have always stood; my consideration, and no doubt he was speaking for the members of the government around him, is political survival at some time in the future'."

Other speakers included Lt.-Col. J. A. Ross (Con. Souris) who charged the government with being mainly concerned with political expediency.

The time to discuss and make definite plans for total conscription was now and all should be done by parliament, said Col. Ross.

SCORES REPORT

He described the royal commission report on the Hong Kong expedition as "a fine piece of whitewash."

Col. Ross suggested that Mr. King he could not meet the present situation, hand over his office to Finance Minister Ilsley or Defence Minister Ralston and ask his successor to form a national government.

Angus MacInnis (C.C.F., Vancouver East) said the government was to be blamed for "lack of honesty" in connection with the manpower plebiscite.

Mr. Gardiner's reference to party considerations in application of a total conscription policy arose when he discussed the speech made by Mr. Hanson last week.

He quoted from Mr. Hanson's speech to indicate the latter's definition of national selective service, as follows:

"It means, in a word, that every man among us shall be called upon to perform the right job, at the right time in the right place in the right way."

He suggested that Mr. Hanson meant that the government should tell every man where he should serve and when.

"We have had governments of that kind in the world both in peacetime and in wartime governments that have attempted to tell the people and direct the people in everything that they undertook to do.

BISMARCK FIRST

"The first sponsor of that system was Bismarck, in Germany, and the outcome of that Bismarckian policy has been the modern Hun of today.

"My honorable friend says that there is only one kind of government that could put that kind of policy into effect—a national government.

"I am inclined to agree with him. On that one point he might have been correct.

"I doubt if there is any political party in Canada with traditions in the past, that understands the place of Canada in the British empire, any political party that desires to come into force in this country in the future, that would place such a policy as that before the people of Canada, before putting it into effect immediately.

"No, the only kind of government which could bring that kind of policy into effect in Canada at present—the only kind of government which would undertake in do so, would be the government with no political past and no desire to have a political future."

Mr. Gardiner reminded that on May 7, 1941, he has said that it would be possible in Canada to raise an army over a three-year period, of 750,000 men.

"I submit to the house that the plans now submitted to it by the minister of national defence (Col. J. L. Ralston) provide for such an army.

"There are something over 600,000 up to the end of the present fiscal year with the necessary troops to carry on during that period of time when the troops now raised are in action.

DRAFT UNNECESSARY

"Under those circumstances we have the possibility of carrying out in Canada the present policy in relation to the army, without conscription."

Mr. Gardiner said there was immediate necessity for having power to send men called up under the N.R.M.A. outside of Canada for service in the United States, Alaska or other closely adjacent areas.

But that did not necessarily mean sending men overseas and he recalled the prime minister's statement last week that conscription for overseas might never be necessary.

He discussed the plebiscite results and the claims by some that the majority affirmative vote was a mandate for immediate conscription.

Commenting on the attitude of each group in the house as revealed in speeches, he said John Blackmore, New Democracy leader, had indicated that his group would not vote for conscription "unless the terms were such that Tobruk and its screening position at Acroma and El Adem, just to the south of Tobruk.

Of the C.C.F. group he said M. J. Coldwell, house leader, had indicated his group would not support a move for conscription "now or in the future" unless "foundations for state socialism were to be established in Canada."

Mr. Gardiner said a careful reading of Mr. Hanson's speech had failed to disclose whether he and his followers would vote for immediate conscription.

Mr. Gardiner said government aide he said the contention of the Prime Minister, Finance Minister Ilsley, Defence Minister Ralston, Munitions Minister Howe and himself were on record "that conscription is not necessary at the present time for service overseas."

MAJORITY "NO" VOTE

This, Mr. Gardiner said, "assures me that the great majority of members on this side of the house, if not all of them, would cast a 'No' vote for conscription if the issue were presented for calling up men for overseas immediately."

Dr. Diefenbaker expressed the hope that such ministers as Mr. Ilsley, Col. Ralston, Revenue Minister Gibson and Navy Minister Macdonald would "disavow" the attitude expressed by Mr. Gardiner "As not representing the attitude of the Government of Canada today."

He said Mr. Gardiner, speaking at Markinch, Sask., in the 1940 election campaign, had placed himself in that school of thought which stood between the groups that did not wish to do anything in the war and the group that wished to do everything.

The government's record on the manpower question had been one of "compromise and put pinning," to "move step by step as and when it was forced to do so."

He said the record of the government and manpower had been a record of "promises, postponements, plebiscite and now procrastination."

"And 600,000 men on active service," interjected Donald McNiven (Lib., Regina.)

RECORD OF PEOPLE

"A brilliant record of enlistments but not the record of the government—that is the record of the people of Canada who are willing and desirous to serve," Mr. Diefenbaker retorted.

"And there are not 600,000 on active service," said Col. Ross.

Mr. Diefenbaker was challenged to give a direct answer to whether or not he favored immediate conscription for overseas service.

He replied: "I say that the time has come when there is only one mobilization that will assure equality and fairness and will assure unity in Canada, so that each province will know that all are properly contributing and all within each province are contributing.

"That is by establishing selective service for overseas immediately, and there is no qualification about that."

Mr. MacInnis said that in Canada unity was necessary not only for the war but to meet the problems which would arise when the peace was made. The first essential to unity was that people should understand clearly why Canada was at war, how she entered the war of her own free will and what Canada expected to get out of the war.

NO REAL EFFORT

No real effort had been made by the government to give the people understanding of the revolutionary character of the present war, which was a break with policies of the past 25 years which led to the war.

Mr. MacInnis said he agreed with Hon. P. J. A. Cardin (former transport minister) when he blamed the government for lack of honesty on conscription. The government was asking freedom to act on imposing conscription as if parliament did not exist and that "is not good enough."

BRITISH ABANDON LINE

Fierce Libyan Battle Moves Nearer Tobruk

By EDWARD KENNEDY

CAIRO, Egypt, June 16.—(AP) — The fierce Libyan battle, in which armored forces of both sides have taken a terrific hammering, moved eastward toward Tobruk today as British and South African troops withdrew from their coastal anchor around Ain El Gazala while heroic anti-tank gunners and tank drivers fought to hold open the road at Acroma.

This meant the British army had given up the old Ain El Gazala-Bir Hacheim line of strong bases and minefields which the Germans first went around, then pierced, and finally reduced one end at a time.

But it also meant the British army had succeeded in escaping a threatened trap when the Germans drove their tanks to Acroma, 16 miles west of Tobruk, to cut off the Ain El Gazala forces, 30 miles farther west.

ACHIEVES AIM

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel thus had managed after three weeks of terrific battling to accomplish what he had aimed at in the first few days, the elimination of the British line for a direct attack on Tobruk and its screening position at Acroma and El Adem, just to the south of Tobruk.

The effort is believed to have cost him heavily and his offensive power is believed to have been spent.

Today's communique said that two divisions took part in the withdrawal and that this completed the resignation of forces which Lt.-Gen. Neil Ritchie announced yesterday.

BRITISH REGROUPING

(Military commentators in London said the withdrawal into Libya of the British 8th army were being regrouped for a general counter attack, but there was no sign that had been started.

(There was no confirmation in London of Axis claims to having sliced through the British positions at Acroma to the coast. Presumably the way was still open for a complete withdrawal into Ain El Gazala if that became necessary.)

through to both the island fortress of Malta and to Tobruk which is under attack after the British abandonment of El Gazala on the Mediterranean coast, 40 miles westward.

POSSIBLY HITLER ORDER

The Cairo advices said the United Nations four-motor bombers scored hits on Italian battleships—at least two of them—in operations that resulted in the sinking of the 10,000-ton Italian cruiser Trieste and one or two other cruisers and probably two destroyers.

Reports from Axis sources said the Italian fleet had been ordered out from its Taranto base—probably by Adolf Hitler—in an effort to try to break a decisive battle with the British fleet.

The grandiose Axis claims listed the ships as said to have been sunk by the Germans in the Mediterranean battle, and 10 sunk by the Italians.

Two Allied convoys—one moving west from Alexandria and one moving east from Gibraltar—were attacked by Axis warships, submarines and airplanes in a three-day battle ending Monday evening, according to the Rome and Berlin radios.

"The convoy en route from Alexandria to Malta consisted of 11 freighters convoyed by 41 escort vessels probably including a United States battleship, eight cruisers and other naval units," the Berlin radio said, quoting a Trans-Ocean agency dispatch from Rome.

ROME, (From Italian Broadcasts), June 16—(AP)—The Italian high command announced today the loss of a heavy Italian cruiser, while claiming destruction of an Allied cruiser and two destroyers, the sinking or setting afire of five other Allied vessels and damage to 12 more in a series of naval and air battles in the central Mediterranean on Monday.

The fighting centred around two large British convoys, one eastbound, the other west-bound.

NARRATIVE OF ACTIONS

The communique, giving a narrative of the action declared:

"Two great convoys arriving from the western and eastern ends of the sea have been attacked by our submarines which hit by torpedo two of the units of a squadron sailing from Gibraltar.

"At dawn on June 15 in the south of Pantelleria, the (Italian) torpedo plane attack, the 7th naval division, formed of two light cruisers and five destroyers, violently attacked a convoy on its way to Malta from Gibraltar.

"Although this convoy was escorted by superior forces composed of at least two cruisers and 12 destroyers it was driven off, damaged and covered itself in a smoke screen.

"CRUISER EXPLODED"

"In the fighting which ensued at close quarters, an enemy cruiser exploded and sank in the face of concentrated fire of the Eugenio de Savoia and the Raimondo Montecuccoli (Italian cruisers of 7,583 and 8,942 tons). Two enemy destroyers were badly hit.

"An enemy cruiser and destroyer were torpedoed by our destroyers.

"Our ships carried out a continuous but unsuccessful enemy air attacks and continued throughout the day offensive action against enemy units.

"Another enemy des royer was sunk by our gunfire.

"Axis air forces intervened in the struggle and scored direct hits on the enemy convoy.

"Four ships were either set on fire or sunk. An enemy gasoline tanker was set afire.

SHIP HEAVILY HIT

"The other big enemy convoy consisting of 26 steamers was attacked by bombers and torpedo-carrying planes coming from our air bases in northern Africa and the Aegean.

"An enemy des royer was sunk and six other units hit. . . .

"In naval engagements which took place to the east and west of Malta we lost a heavy cruiser which was first hit by aerial torpedoes and then by sea torpedoes.

"One of our destroyers was seriously damaged but was able to reach a home port. The greater part of the crews were saved."

The communique added that a Russian submarine had been sunk in the Black Sea by Italian motor torpedo boats.

CBC May Pay Press Service For Its News

OTTAWA, June 16.—(CP)—Dealing with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's news arrangements at a meeting of the House of Commons radio committee today, General Manager Gladstone Murray said consideration is being given to a new arrangement under which payments might be made for services provided by news agencies.

The gathering of news was becoming more costly and the finance minister, dealing in making an immediate study, Mr. Murray said.

The Canadian Press had approached the CBC with a view to changing arrangements and in fairness to CP members it was thought some payment should be made for news. CP now had facilities through Press News Ltd. for selling its service to radio stations.

CP OUT OF POCKET

The Canadian Press had to pay The Associated Press for news which it gave without charge to the CBC and was out of pocket to that extent.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, said consideration should be given to the service provided newspapers by announcers in reforming their listeners to newspapers for fuller reports. He said he recognized The Canadian Press was not a newspaper publisher.

"The press also senders a service to the CBC," D. G. Ross, (Cons. Toronto St. Paul's) said.

Mr. Murray told the committee negotiations were being opened in a very friendly manner and various proposals were under review. The Canadian Press had indicated it was not seeking the full commercial rate which would be between $120,000 and $125,000 a year.

MEETING SATURDAY

The finance committee of the corporation was to meet a CP delegation on Saturday and Mr. Murray said he expected an arrangement would be completed before the house radio committee ended its deliberations.

The Canadian Press and British United Press had given generous service in providing news, with the CBC paying only equipment cost.

Later in the morning Mr. Ross asked whether the British United Press had asked for a revision of rates. He also asked whether it were true that while The Canadian Press furnished much of the news, the greater part of foreign news was obtained from British United Press and whether it is proposed to compensate the latter service if a new arrangement is made with CP.

Mr. Murray said no application had yet been made by British United Press. Both services were extremely good, and it would be almost impossible to determine how much of each was used.

"We owe a great debt of gratitude to both The Canadian Press and British United Press, and I hope we will be able to continue both services," he said. "I should be reluctant to see either service cut off."

The CBC had recently been approached by Reuters News Agency, and the Reuters offer was receiving consideration.

Removal Of Japs Slowed At Coast

VANCOUVER, June 16—(CP)—British Columbia security commission officials said today transportation difficulties between Vancouver and Nelson, B.C., has slowed the removal of Japanese from the coastal defence zone.

Inability to secure lumber and repairs, necessary to put former "ghost" towns in condition for occupancy by the Japanese, also has presented difficulties.

The next large community of Japanese to be formed will be at Sandon, B.C. 30 miles north of Nelson. It is expected about 1,300 Japanese will be accommodated there, commission officials said.

Assistant Commissioner F. J. Mead of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and member of the three-man commission, and Dr. Lyall Hodgins of Vancouver, commission medical advisor, will leave Winnipeg tonight for Ottawa to report to the department of labor on the suitability of Indian residential schools in British Columbia, Alberta and Manitoba for Japanese evacuees.

Lt.-Gen. Stuart Sees No Reason For Any Alarm

VANCOUVER, June 16.—(CP)—There is "no reason to be alarmed" over the "little invasion" of the Aleutian islands by the Japanese, Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, chief of general staff, said in an interview here before leaving today for Victoria to assume temporary command of the Pacific command of the Canadian (Active) army. He arrived from Ottawa by plane last night.

"There is no reason to worry even in Prince Rupert, and that is much closer to the islands than this city," Gen. Stuart said.

"Principally, we military men are interested in preventing any comfort from reaching the enemy. We are very much concerned with the morale of the people of Canada, and I'm sure, it is very heartening to our enemy when we show any sign of even slightly easing our present attitude."

Assistant Commissioner F. J. Mead of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and member of the three-man commission, and Dr. Lyall Hodgins of Vancouver, commission medical advisor, will leave Winnipeg tonight for Ottawa to report to the department of labor on the suitability of Indian residential schools in British Columbia, Alberta and Manitoba for Japanese evacuees.

Soldiers Back From Overseas

By The Canadian Press

Their fighting days finished, nearly five hundred Canadian soldiers are back in the Dominion, invalided home from front line posts in Great Britain.

Few, if any, were suffering from wounds. Majority of the soldiers returning because of stomach trouble or because the damp English climate did not agree with them. Others, distinguished by their bandages, were victims of mix-ups on blacked-out English roads.

Giving the men a welcome were Red Cross officials handing out cigarets, oranges and chocolate bars. Spr. C. Brady of Calgary couldn't tear himself away from "the first good piece of chocolate I've had for ages" long enough to explain what was sending him home.

UNITY FAILURE

Government's Policy On Conscription Is Branded Worst Form Appeasement

OTTAWA, June 16—(CP)—Victor Quelch (N.D., Acadia) in the House of Commons last night described the government's conscription policy as "appeasement in its very worst form".

He said if the objective had been national unity, the policy had failed. It had failed, too, if the objective was unity within the Liberal party.

Mr. Quelch was speaking during the debate on Prime Minister Mackenzie King's motion for second reading of the bill to amend the National Resources Mobilization Act.

Mr. Quelch discussed the government's method of financing the war and declared that the men who fight and win the war should not be asked to come home and go to work to pay for it.

But under the system of financing followed by the government those who return after winning the war would be faced with the huge task of paying for it.

NEW SOCIAL ORDER

The Prime Minister had said that there would be a new social order after the war but all the promises had been vague as to details.

"I well remember such promises given to us in France in the last war," said Mr. Quelch. He said government spokesmen went to France and promised Canadian soldiers that they would always be cared for and jobs would be provided for them. But the promises had quickly been forgotten when the war was over.

"Before calling upon people to make further sacrifices in this way the government should issue a declaration of principles that will apply the Atlantic Charter to Canada and show how it will work."

Mr. Quelch was stopped by Deputy Speaker Vien when he proceeded to discuss after war conditions. Mr. Vien said after-war problems were not relevant to the motion.

Mr. Quelch was spoken to three times by Mr. Vien on this point. He protested that for three days there had been speeches touching upon after war problems and he was attempting to reply to them.

CALLED TO ORDER

He was again called to order when he mentioned "inflation."

At the opening of the night session, Angus MacInnis (C.C.F., Vancouver East) moved an amendment to Bill No. 80—amending the Mobilization Act—to permit the government to impose conscription for overseas when it wished.

Mr. MacInnis moved that Bill No. 80 be not read a second time, but that it be resolved that the principle of the bill was inadequate and inequitable insofar as it permitted conscription of men for overseas without reference to parliament and was therefore contrary to the peace, order and good government of Canada.

The amendment was accepted by Speaker A. Glen.

A previous C.C.F. amendment, moved by M. J. Coldwell, house leader of the group, was ruled out of order by Speaker Glen last Thursday. He ruled it out of order on the grounds that a similar amendment proposed by Mr. Coldwell had been considered earlier in the session in course of the debate on the address in reply to the Throne Speech.

Mr. MacInnis, resuming the speech he had begun before the house adjourned for dinner, said a small group in Canada had been calling for conscription of men and labor but was not prepared to give up even a fraction of its wealth or privilege.

RECALLS CASE

Mr. MacInnis said he recalled the case of James Duncan, former deputy air minister, who had been reported on Nov. 1, 1941, as demanding conscription. A short time before the Massey-Harris company had called Mr. Duncan back to his post in that company and he had left his position in the air department.

The men Mr. Duncan would have conscripted would be in the army for the duration and could not go home when business or family called.

English-speaking Canadians felt pride in Britain's fortitude in the war, but were in the war because of its issues at stake, Mr. MacInnis said.

They were fighting to maintain the position which had been won by years of sacrifice and struggle, to maintain the rights of the common people to enrich their lives through their own organizations and live under the rule of law.

The C.C.F. had criticized British imperialism as vigorously as any group. There was the hope of a new world to follow the war. The C.C.F. wanted an all-out effort, but could not support the government in its present action unless there was a guarantee of wider application than the conscription of manpower alone.

SHARP CLASH

Roy Graham (Lib. Swift Current) immediately clashed with C.C.F. house leader Coldwell when he opened his speech with criticism of the C.C.F. group for attempting to make an all-out war effort conditional upon adoption of a system of state socialism and Mr. Coldwell at once denied that he had ever advocated state socialism.

Mr. Graham said he was convinced the C.C.F. group had not the slightest hope that its proposals for state socialism would be adopted now or in the near future.

He questioned the value to the war effort of the C.C.F. house leader, saying in effect he would refuse to support any government measures unless the government accepted the dictates of his group.

Mr. Graham suggested that the C.C.F. and all other groups should put aside hopes of achieving any political success in wartime. What would be their impulse if a messenger suddenly entered the chamber and announced that the Japanese were within the west block and the Germans in the east block, he said, and the present circumstances of the war rendered such an illustration not too far fetched.

CONSCRIPT LABOR

Personally he was prepared to conscript manpower, wealth and resources if that step became necessary. He would go farther than suggested by the C.C.F. group and conscript labor, if that became necessary, said Mr. Graham.

Lionel Bertrand (Lib. Terrebonne) who spoke in French, said he was "absolutely opposed to this bill," and would vote against it. "I voted against the plebiscite which I characterized at that time as camouflage; today I am voting against the bill that proves to me that I was right in condemning the plebiscite."

Mr. Bertrand said that the fact that he was against the conscription bill and against the holding of the plebiscite, as was the great majority in Quebec province, does not mean that we of Quebec, as a certain section of the imperialist press would have the public believe, are opposed to the war effort, or are traitors to the British crown.

"At the present time, it would appear that the Britishis and their newspapers are banded together to direct their efforts against Quebec and against Quebec alone. I am no separatist, Mr. Speaker. I feel that Quebec cannot live alone, even as I believe that none of the other eight provinces can live alone. I am not a narrow nationalist. My idea of country embraces the entire Dominion."

The Terrebonne member referred to "Pastor Shields" and added that this man, "who should have been interned long ago because no single Canadian has done so much to fan the flames of prejudice, still continues to attack our province, our clergy, our institutions. Do not these people know that not a province in the Dominion has shown more tolerance and more charity than Quebec—charity taught us by our clergy."

(Mr. Bertrand did not further identify "Pastor Shields," though it was presumed he was referring to Rev. T. T. Shields, Toronto Baptist minister.)

REPUGNANT TO QUEBEC

Mr. Bertrand said the idea of conscription for overseas was repugnant to the pride of the people of Quebec. "The Quebec people have never forgotten and will never forget the conscription of 1917, which was a political manoeuvre, directed solely against Quebec.

"Conscription would be a monumental error, an affront to the needed defence of our country; is the country adequately protected against invasion from either or both coasts?"

Eugene Durocher (Lib., Montreal-St. James), also speaking in French, said he was opposed to any change in the National Resources Mobilization act which would entail compulsory military service overseas.

Mr. Durocher said that Australia had defeated overseas conscription on measures both in the last war and in the present conflict, and that conscription had also been rejected by India, New Zealand, South Africa and Ireland.

George Fulford, (Lib., Leeds) made a plea for fresh and sympathetic understanding among French and English-speaking Canadians for the great peril threatening the democratic institutions of the world —a peril which required their common effort to help defeat.

RIGHT, NECESSARY

He said it was right and necessary for the government to have the right to impose conscription if such a step became necessary.

Mr. Fulford said he believed conscription was "the fairest and most equitable and surest way of raising an army and maintaining reinforcements."

"Hop" To East War Zone Told By Canuck Officer

Flt. Lt. Burton G. Johnson of Windsor, Ont., senior photographer of the R.C.A.F. overseas public relations directorate, recently completed a trip to the Far East with a Canadian squadron. His account of the flight follows—EDITOR.

By FLT. LT. B. G. JOHNSON

WITH THE R. C. A. F. IN THE FAR EAST, June 16.—(CP)—This is the story of how "D for Donald" flew to the Far East, "D for Donald" being an R. C. A. F. flying boat, part of a Canadian squadron which has entered a new theatre of war.

It was early in the morning when the batman came charging into my room in a northern Ireland town. "Sir, you are to get aboard the aircraft right away," he said. "There's not even time for a shave or breakfast."

In a few minutes we were on the dock waiting for the dinghies to take us out to the aircraft.

Everybody thought at least the dinghy was sinking when, as we got in, Sgt. Jesse James, a wireless operator from Cheshire, Eng., shouted, "Look out!"

NOT THAT BAD

But it wasn't quite as bad as that. "Watch out for these eggs," he yelled. "I want them fried, not scrambled in the bottom of the boat!" LAC. Gordon Hooper of Winnipeg, detailed to look after rations, did a quick rescue job.

We came alongside and as if on a routine duty flight each man went about his work. Everybody had a job. The air gunners mounted the armament in the blisters forward, the riggers went to the nose to clear the mooring lines and the wireless operator checked his apparatus.

Then the dinghy bearing the captain, Sqdn. Ldr. J. E. Scott of Galt, Ont., and the second pilot, P/O. S. H. Kemsley of Calgary, came alongside. The wireless arrangements were checked personally by the captain with P/O. L. Lumsden of London, Ont., a wireless operator air gunner.

Sgt. W. J. Jackson of Toronto, our navigator, set a course in the general direction of Gibraltar. Hours later we made our first landfall. I watched the crew at work, including P/O. A. M. Bell of Montreal, checking and rechecking his guns, and LAC. J. Burnett, an instrument maker, busily engaged in making breakfast.

NO BLACKOUT

That evening we sat out on a hotel verandah and marvelled at the bright lights—there was no blackout.

Next day we were off again down the Mediterranean. Evening found us over the Libyan desert, a horrible contrast, dotted with the debris of a war in progress.

At the next stop we donned tropical kit and what was more important, for a few pennies, gorged oranges and other fruit.

I made the next hop with Sqdn. Ldr. I. H. Randall of Bristol, N.B., and Second Pilot Sgt. L. E. Gardiner of Woodstock, Ont., a former lawyer. Others in the crew included P/O. J. Williams of Oaklake, Man., an observer; P/O. R. A. Lasser of Powell River, B.C., wireless operator, and Sgt. C. G. Kenait of London, Ont., an armorer.

Nightfall found us over the deep rich blue of the sea. I had new companions now. The pilot was a Flt. Lt. Furaman and his co-pilot FO. the Hon. Hugh Fielding, and other crew members included PO. George Vivian of Neepawa, Man., observer, Sgt. Thomas Kelly, Winnipeg, a former druggist.

Our last lap completed, we came down at early dawn without incident. We were met by the commanding officer of our squadron, Wing Cmdr. J. C. Plant.

Chinese Urge Launching Of Pacific Drive

CHUNGKING, June 16.—(AP)—A government spokesman urged today the immediate launching of a major Pacific offensive should be given at least equal consideration with possible drives in other war theatres.

If the United Nations "continue to be complacent" toward Japan, he said, she may become "the most difficult of the Axis powers to defeat."

The spokesman prefaced his appeal by asserting Japan's successes could be explained by what he called the false impression she was the weakest link in the Axis chain.

He said he differed from any theory that Japan would collapse once Germany was defeated. Although he did not say China would collapse unless help were forthcoming, he declared her situation would be serious.

JAP OBJECTIVES

The spokesman enumerated three objectives of Japanese drives in China:

1—To eliminate remaining United Nations bases which might be used to attack Japan;

2—To seize strategic points for attacking the United Nations;

3—To consolidate dominated areas and develop their resources.

C.M.A. Advances Principles For Insurance Plan

JASPER, Alta., June 16.—(CP)—The general council of the Canadian Medical Association, in session here yesterday held a lengthy discussion on the adoption of a health insurance scheme in Canada.

Councillors were informed the federal government had been studying the question of health insurance and had asked the medical profession for its reaction to a dominion health scheme.

On this basis, councillors laid down several principles which they felt should be embodied in a health insurance plan and also expressed eagerness and willingness to cooperate in the formation of legislation for the adoption of health insurance.

Among principles laid down were:

1—All insured persons should be allowed to choose their own doctors.

2—Administration of the insurance should be under independent health insurance commissions.

3—Indigents should be cared for under the scheme, with their premiums paid by the government.

4—The plan will be compulsory for those whose income is lower than would allow for adequate medical care.

5—The scheme would provide for additional specialist services.

6—No economic barrier should be interposed between doctor and patient.

7—Best possible standard of service to be required of professions and remuneration of profession should be consistent therewith.

MONEY FOR PLAN

The meeting was told that money for the setting up of the system should come from the government, the insured man and the employer of the insured man.

Dr. E. A. McCullough of Toronto told council that during the past year the C.M.A. has sent more than $200,000 worth of new and used surgical instruments to Great Britain.

The instruments were collected by a committee headed by Dr. McCulloch. He said 204 cartons had been shipped including more than 20,000 individual pieces.

Various other reports were heard by the committee which will be submitted to general sittings of the 73rd annual convntion which starts Wednesday.

C.M.A. TO ESTABLISH SCHOLARSHIP FUND

JASPER, Alta., June 16—(CP)—The Canadian Medical Association will set up a scholarship fund in tribute to the memory of Sir Frederick Banting, Canada's foremost scientist and co-discoverer of insulin who was killed in an airplane crash off Canada's east coast last year. It was decided at a meeting of the general council of the C.M.A. here yesterday.

To be known as the Banting Memorial Fund, it will provide two scholarships to graduates of Canadian medical colleges to enable them to carry on research work in clinical medicine or surgery.

100,000 From Land Of Shamrock Serving With Britons On All Fronts

By FOSTER BARCLAY

LONDON, June 16.—(CP)—Sure it's the O'Sheas and the O'Briens, the Fegens, and the Funucanes and a host of others who left hearths in Roscommon or Limerick or perhaps Tipperary that are after giving new fame to Irish valor.

While Eire observes strict neutrality, her sons nevertheless are fighting for Britain wherever Britons fight. And it's a grand job they're doing too.

In Eire the newspapers and radios seldom give the people anything more than information contained in official communiques. Officially, for instance, the people have never been told that 100,000 Irishmen are serving with British forces and that countless numbers are playing civilian roles in Britain's war effort.

FOE NO SECRET

But if Eire is neutral there is no real secret about who she is neutral against—not with the O'Sheas and the O'Briens, and Funucanes sailing and fighting and flying for Britain and their fame known from Bray to Banfree.

In this war three natives of Eire have won the Victoria Cross. Scores of men over the Irish Sea wear the Distinguished Service Order, the Distinguished Flying Medal, the Military Cross, the George Cross and the George Medal.

Not a man or woman, boy or girl, in Eire but knows the fire and brimstone tale of Capt. Fegarty Fegen of the Jervis Bay who loved his command and his duty and a fight against overwhelming odds better than life. Irishmen were never told officially however, that Fegen was born at Ballinanty, County Tipperary.

Capt. Fegen was awarded the V.C. posthumously. The Jervis Bay was an armed merchantman sunk Nov. 5, 1940 while protecting a convoy.

Eire newspapers refer often to a "well-known" flier destroying another enemy plane, sweeping his score on well past 30. That's Flt. Lt. Brendan (Paddy) Funucane, 22-year-old native of Dublin with the R.A.O., D.F.C., and two bars.

From one end of Eire to the other the people also know about Acting Group Capt. Francis Beamish, one of four Irish football-playing brothers who became an R.A.F. hero. It was a blow indeed to Dunmanway in County Cork when this D.S.O., D.F.C., flier was reported missing.

LED "SUICIDE" ATTACK

At Lough Derg in Tipperary they'll tell you all about Eugene Esmonde. Remember, Eire is neutral. Officially the people of Tipperary don't know much about this war. Still, they'll tell how Esmonde led the flight of "suicide" Swordfish planes against the three German battleships in the English channel, that action that earned the young Irish lieutenant-commander a posthumous V.C.

Third Irish winner of the V.C. in this war was Harold Ervine-Andrews, 31-year-old major in the East Lancashire Regiment. He fought at Dunkerque. His man from County Wexford, and killed 18 Germans with a rifle and as many more with a Bren gun.

Two of the first three clerical awards of the war were won by Irish chaplains. Rev. Thomas Duggan, a licentiate in sacred theology of Cork, and Rev. Richard Craig, a Dublin man, each received the Military Cross for their bravery in the Battle of Flanders.

Tank and artillery duels in the swelting desert brought further fame to Irish fighters. William Newell of Moville, County Donegal, and Maj. George Knox-Veebles each won the D.S.O. while Lieut. A. C. Doyle of Baily, County Dublin, and Lieut. Miles Macermont of Boyle, County Roscommon, each got the Military Cross.

2-Year Sentence Is Suspended In $1,000 Robbery

LETHBRIDGE, June 16. — (CP) —Pleading guilty in police court yesterday to a charge of breaking and entering the T. Eaton company store here more than two years ago and stealing $1,000 from the safe, John Gorda was placed on two years suspended sentence.

Gorda was suspected of the crime after it happened Feb. 10, 1940, but disappeared. He was picked up by Sergt. R. Dunlop of Lethbridge city police who recognized Gorda when he came back to town Saturday.

Police said Gorda admitted climbing in a second storey window of the store and punching the safe single-handed. Gorda told police he had been in eastern Canada for the past two years.

Work Clothing Frills Banned

OTTAWA, June 16.—(CP)—The Wartime Prices and Trade Board extended its economy program today to work clothing, leather garments and cotton sportswear.

All unnecessary frills in manufacture of this apparel, the board said, have been eliminated under an order issued by A. Bradshaw, administrator of work clothing, on recommendation of an advisory committee of the industry.

Affected are overalls, smocks, shop coats, dungarees, work shirts, men's cotton work pants and sport pants, boys' cotton long pants, breeches and shorts, leather jackets, windbreakers, ski slacks and bush coats.

Some of the economies ordered include elimination of cuffs and excessively long legs on men's cotton work trousers; flaps on pockets, pleats on trousers, wasteful tunnel belt loops, unnecessarily wide legs, military pleats on pockets, sewing on woven lapels and pocket reinforcements. Unnecessary buttons also are forbidden. Zipper fasteners are still permissible on windbreakers, combinations and a few other clothing articles.

Germans Ordered Exchange Bonds For Reich Issue

NEW YORK, June 16.—(AP)—All German owners of stocks and bonds have been ordered to turn their holdings over to the Reichsbank and accept in compensation Reich treasury bonds of current issue, the New York Times reported yesterday from Berne, Switzerland.

This amounts to virtual expropriation, the Times said, since the treasury bonds must remain in the custody of the Reichsbank and will be treated as blocked securities which cannot be disposed of by their owners.

The Road To Washington

Berlin relays an imperial announcement made at Tokyo which explains that the purpose is to establish a base in the Aleutian islands for future operations against North America. There is no reason to suppose Tokyo is not in this case telling the truth to its ally. Whatever other aims may be in view, the creation of bases somewhere from which to attack this continent must be part of the Tojo war plans.

If the "northern route" is the one chosen, Canada's position is apparent to anyone who cares to look at the map. Bases in Alaska would be useless for an all-out attack on the United States. For that enterprise, land and water jumping-off places along the Canadian coast and inland would be required.

That an immediate attempt to invade the continent is planned may be doubted. But the road to Washington from the Aleutians runs this way. That is a plain geographic fact, and it carries obvious implications as to the need of building up forces to block that road. Whether the attempt to invade is on Tokyo's time table for the immediate future or at a date more remote.

No Reason To Quit

The failure of the conference on the refunding of the provincial debt is of course discouraging to hopes that the debt of the city may be overhauled and substantially lower interest rates arranged. But it does not by any means extinguish such hopes. It does not even mean that a refunding of the province's obligations has been finally barred.

The conditions remain which made the bondholders willing to negotiate with the province. They know now that they could obtain a bargain which would yield them 1.06 per cent on their investments more than they are now getting, whether there is no prospect that they will get more without making the bargain, the inducement to the bondholders to reconsider the matter is likely to become stronger as they study their position.

In any case, Edmonton deserves considerate treatment, and it would be to the advantage of the city's bondholders to reduce the debt charges which have to be met, as this would enable the city to carry out improvements not otherwise possible. Despite the breakdown of the provincial conference, the city council should keep right on urging a new deal on its own account.

Speed And Crashes

During the first month in which the 40-mile-an-hour limit was imposed on highways throughout Canada, motor accidents in Alberta showed a sharp decrease. There were only 38 accidents on the highways of this province during May, with one death resulting. In May last year the accidents numbered 99, the fatalities 11. In April, the month before the 40-mile rule came into effect, accidents numbered 94, fatalities 3.

In Edmonton there were 68 accidents and no fatalities in May, compared with 87 accidents and 2 deaths in May of last year.

In seven other provinces the returns for May are reported to show a trend similar to that in Albertaa. British Columbia was the only one of the nine to report a drop between accident figures for May of this year and last too small to be significant; and the only one in which May accidents were more numerous than those in April.

It would not do to base too definite a conclusion on the returns for a single month. But so far as these go they show very definitely that accidents and fatalities were fewer all over Canada after the limit had been set. If subsequent months confirm the inference from this, there is a possibility that 40 miles may become the permanent maximum rate on Canadian highways.

Planes Versus Ships-And Plants

It is disclosed that the battle in the Coral Sea was a naval engagement in which naval vessels were only indirectly involved, and these not the kind of ships which "shot it out" with each other in former wars. The fighting was evidently done mainly by aircraft carriers, operating by "remote control". They released planes which attacked the enemy ships, while the fleets remained a hundred miles or so apart.

Again the question is raised whether the great battleship is now an obsolete weapon. Laymen are not qualified to give the answer, but undoubtedly the designers of fighting craft have the problem to solve. Recalling the fate of the Hood, the Bismarck, the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, the reality and the importance of the question are apparent.

At least the Coral Sea battle confirms the showing of these other encounters that unwieldly surface ships must have ample air protection when they are attacked by dive-bombers and torpedo planes. They cannot protect themselves, however well equipped with ack-ack guns.

In effect the airplane is a cannon with a range of hundreds or even thousands of miles. It drops the "shells" a hundred times farther from the starting point than any gun can throw them.

However Hitler may applaud when Axis bombers sink an Allied ship, he cannot get much comfort when he reflects that the bomber is just as effective over land as over sea. The planes which are delivering their bombs on German munitions plants can "sink" his war machine just as certainly as they can send a ship to the bottom.

Canada's celebration of United Nations day was postponed to Dominion Day, presumably to avoid having two demonstrations fall within little more than a fortnight. —V—

There is now daily air mail to Ft. St. John, the twiceweekly service beyond that point being continued. This prompt reponse to the representations made by the Chamber of Commerce of the city will be important in a business way, while the thousands of men now working on construction around and beyond St. John will be put in closer communication with friends "outside".

—V—

The Nazi authorities admit—or boast that they have killed 234 Czechs in the terror campaign they started when Heydrich was shot. They have not claimed that any of those murdered did the shooting or had any part in the plot. The only charge made is that they were anti-Nazis. How many Canadians will have to face firing squads if the butchers ever get the chance to apply here the extermination policy they are applying in Czechoslovakia?

Today's Text

By thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned.—Matthew 12:37.

It is as easy to draw back a stone thrown with force from the hand, as to recall a word once spoken.—Menander.

Plain Fact

When we talk lightly about huge overseas expeditionary forces, this fact must be remembered: Our ability to transport huge forces overseas will decline if the ratio between ship launchings and sinkings is not drastically altered. At the rate we shall be less able to carry huge armies overseas next year than we are now. All this is frankly admitted in Washington and in the writings of the best-informed military writers. The admission of the difficulty is the best assurance that it will be overcome.

But clearly at the moment, any increased movement of troops overseas, any increased movement of weapons and supplies, must be at the expense of civilian movements. It is not possible to move bananas from South America, tea from the Orient or even sugar from the West Indies in ships that are needed to carry arms to Britain and Russia. A steady decline in luxury imports, perhaps their disappearance, is certainly in sight.—Bruce Hutchison, in the Victoria Daily Times.

Some Reasons Why United States Overlooks Canada

By J. N. S. IN THE OTTAWA JOURNAL.

NEW YORK.—In the last few days several articles have appeared concerning United States indifference to Canada and coolness to Great Britain. Canadians who know some Americans who are ardently pro-British, as do we all, will perhaps be disputing the earlier contentions of this writer that there is a "situation" growing up in the States about which we should be concerned.

By way of partial evidence let's list a few items which recently appeared in one single edition of the New York Times. The Times, of course, is about the most pro-British of all the United States papers and consistently does the best job of representing Britain and Canada, in the latter case thanks just now to the able work of its Ottawa correspondent, Mr. Percy Philip. Thus if we can gather evidence against us in the Times it can be assumed that there is much more and much fruitier to be found elsewhere.

(1) A report of a speech made in New York by Lord Marley telling the U.S. that the people of Britain are doing ten times as much for Russia as the people of the United States. The member of Britain's House of Lords stated:

"The people of the United States haven't seen yet what a real tax burden is like. In England, everybody who makes more more than $400 a year is subject to a direct tax. Still the English are sending ten times as much money for relief supplies to Russia as Americans are. There is no reason why you in America can't supply ten times as much money for this purpose as the British do."

The psycho-analyst to judge the averbritish do."

Reaction

All of which may be perfectly true; but it doesn't require a psycho-analst to judge the average American's reaction to such a speech, and from a member of the British House of Lords! The thing might have been given to any one of a thousand top Americans to say, and they would have done it usefully and gladly.

(2) A story out of Moscow on the next page saying that for the first time in history the Russian Academy of Sciences elected foreigners to honorary membership. There were three Americans and two British—somehow not indicating any Russian sympathy with Lord Marley's case.

(3) A Washington report that United States mission is leaving to go to the Union of South Africa "to seek means of developing vast natural resources for the United Nations' war effort." And this was "the forerunner of several that will go out ultimately to neutral and Allied Nations throughout the world to explore their potentialities." United States experts would follow the missions to aid and advise in consequent operations.

Does anyone have difficulty in imagining what the mass of United States opinion will be about the need of U.S. talent to develop the British Empire's Union of South Africa? And if such development progresses far will the U.S. interests step out after the war?

(4) A speech reported from Australia, made by Premier John Curtin following the naval victory in the Coral Sea. It referred naturally to the U.S. and Australia's part in the responsible for the victory, but then went on in a war speech of general terms that notably did not mention Great Britain. Thus:

"Americans and Australians side by side have stood together in the cause in which they and their countries are pledged. We can be proud and grateful for what has been done. But words of gratitude are not enough. Deeds count . . ."

Such reports, following the Curtin-Casey-Churchill tiff and added to Australia's exceedingly well played part in distributing news of Australia through the United States, are daily increasing the growing American enthusiasm for Australia, an enthusiasm growing at the expense of the Empire as a whole, and particularly at the expense of Great Britain.

(5) A report from London of Britain's difficulty in carrying on trade with neutral countries because of her lease-lend tie-up with the United States. Britain, said the report, was asking the United States for aid in the problem. All of which, of course, is easily though wrongly interpreted by the careless and the malicious as a whine from Britain because she can't have jam on both sides.

Strong Defence

Now it is possible that with the exception of the Lord Marley affair a strong defence can be made for each of these items. But granting that it is surely apparent that Britain and Canada are never in a position to make that defence. Our case never catches up with the first interpretation.

It isn't the R.C.A.F. that bombs Brest or Berlin, it is the R.A.F., or so the U.S. reads.

It isn't a Canadian corvette that does the convoy work, it is that British or now the United Nations' Navy.

Canadians guarding England don't make news, however important their task.

Canadian arguments about conscription sound strangely academic to Americans who take conscription for granted. All they know is that we haven't conscription and they presume from there that our men are indifferently going to war.

New Zealanders, Australians, Filipinos, Maltese, Greeks, Norwegians, Dutch and Chinese, British and Scots and Irish, Americans and Burmese — all these peoples are known by Americans to have been in the conflict. Canadians haven't made the same kind of news, and it is no use telling them of our war production for they have a war production beside which our own is a mere drop in a big bucket.

All of these conditions add up to something that is now and may be very much more uncomfortable for Canada. It's all right to put into Hansard statistical data showing the rapidity of increase in the output of Bren guns. But try getting the man in the Brooklyn subways to read Hansard, or the man in Timbuctoo.

Nazis' Squeals Reveal Them As Cowards

By HAROLD L. WEIR

There is a certain type of insanity in which the victim is convinced that only his own actions and reactions are just and honorable. Everybody else is dishonorable and unjust.

This kind of lunacy is recognized as prevalent by alienists.

But how can one explain a mental seizure of this kind overtaking an entire nation? Is it possible for eighty million people to collectively mad?

And yet that seems to be the case.

Harold L. Weir

Berlin still has ears in America. Ward, a renegade American from Iowa, co-stars with Lord Haw-Haw in telling the Anglo-Saxon world what's wrong with it.

Ward is the more contemptible of the two and the stage was quite properly set for him after the bombardment of Cologne and Essen. He defined it as the "greatest mass murder of the world"—an amazing statement, though one I'm inclined to admit that Germany should be a competent authority on mass murder. The German claim was that only one hundred and eleven were killed at Cologne. More than two hundred and their death is the reprisals for the shooting of Heydrich.

How could a man come to the conclusion that the killing of one hundred and eleven, in a fortified city, in an attack made upon military objectives, was not justified but that the shooting of over two hundred for the killing of Heydrich, the German murder expert, was just and right and proper?

Absurd Claim

Of course the suggestion that there was slightly over a hundred Germans killed in the Cologne raid is absurd. The loss of life was much greater; but when one is trained to speak in disregard of facts and deems that the bigger the lie the greater the service to the nation, then naturally arguments lack logical presentation and become incapable of belief, possibly unworthy of analysis.

Ward told of the number of bombers destroyed, the tremendous cost to Great Britain, the waste of precious petrol, the loss of Britain's airmen, and in general, the meanness of the attack upon a sacred city such as Cologne.

The Germans were not always so squeamish. They went into Spain and fought in a quarrel which was nothing to them. The sole object was to test the efficiency of German weapons.

They bombed Rotterdam after the Dutch had surrendered and the city was wholly without defences. Not a gun was fired by the Dutch. They simply shoved their fists at the sky and died where they were—twenty thousand of them! It was the greatest horror raid ever perpetrated on humanity. It served no purpose. It attained no object.

But the German experts wanted to see what would happen when an attack of this kind was made upon an undefended city.

They can now examine Essen, a well defended city, and draw their conclusions from the things they see!

Reprisal

Behind this is a peculiar thing. The German people were taught to believe that the attack made upon Britain were purely a matter of reprisal for British attacks upon Germany.

In his book, "Berlin Diary" William L. Shirer, the American correspondent resident in Berlin throughout the early years of the war, makes this point quite clear. The official reports of the German High Command stated repeatedly that Germany decided to bomb London only after Britain first had bombed Berlin. He quotes from one German publication after another in which this lie was repeated and driven home with insistent force.

Is it possible that the entire German nation with the exception of a few who are the authors of the falsehood, believes this—has been hypnotized by propaganda into accepting the idea that an attack upon a German city is a crime, an attack upon British city a just reprisal and worthy of the highest commendation of God and man?

Poisoned Minds

This is the gravest charge that can be made against Hitler. He has succeeded in destroying the mind of the nation. With cynical and calculated determination he poisoned the mind of the people, stated deliberately, falsehoods would have to be used to serve the need of the hour.

Here is an extract from one of Hitler's speeches delivered in September 1940:

"I waited three months without answering the British night bombings in the hope they would stop this mischief. But Churchill saw in this a sign of weakness. You will understand that we are now answering, night for night. And when the British air force drops two or three or four thousand kilograms of bombs, then we will in one night drop 150-230-300 or 400,000 kilograms."

What a sweeping lie! Germany had been bombing Britain for months before this. The R.A.F. stated in June, 1940, that German aerial attacks on Britain had cost the Germans a loss of 133 planes —91 British planes were destroyed."

As for his promise to repay Britain a hundred to one, he can't—that is the reason he doesn't.

The simple fact is that Germany was certain that the British air force could be destroyed, blasted out of the sky, flattened on the ground.

Farmer Is Exploited

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Editor, Bulletin: Isn't it just too bad? The city folk are going to have to pay a little extra for their beef. It is sure to mean one less show every month or a couple of beers less, or one less ice cream for their spoiled youngsters.

Meat prices here today are about the same as they were in England in 1928 when I was last in business there. At that time £3 —or roughly $15—was a good wage, yet although I operated two hairy stores we never heard anyone grumbling about high prices.

One thing is clear to me, that in England a farmer is respected and looked upon as a great necessity, while here, well he's just a hick to be exploited and cajoled until he sells his herds and lets the weeds grow in disgust.

Now, why is it a farmer can go to work in the city and get $10 to earn) up to $10 a day, and those who stick it out on the farm can barely make a living, even after considerable investment?

High cost of feed, blighted spuds, washed-out grain, chicken mortality, loss of hog litters, labor shortage, and a dozen other things indicate that it's time the farmer got into the hand wagon.

Two cents a pound, POOH!

No Detriment

Editor, Bulletin: I'm afraid "Get Wise Girls" has become rather muddled. What makes her think English war brides are a detriment to Canada?

I became a Canadian war bride 25 years ago and since coming to Canada have met many sister brides in the most outlying places. I find they are doing a fine job of being Canadians.

I returned to England ten years ago to visit my family for six months. Instead I stayed two months, and despite many protests and tears came "Home." I love England deeply but would not live there for the whole of the British Isles.

The girls there are still home girls, yet modern; the boys will find they have not married a bunch of hep cats and tin can cooks, and, most important of all, they have home, family and a host of friends to take a long chance on a man with strange habits from a strange country.

Water Witching

Editor, Bulletin: Seeing your article re witching for water in your paper a few days ago I thought you would like to know of my own experience along this line. 35 years ago I was staying the winter with friends on a ranch 3 miles north of Sicilter, a district where water is very deep down; some wells are 200 feet deep. The snow was very deep and these friends had horses and cattle but no water and had to drive the stock a mile to a creek every day and cut a hole in the ice. The creek finally dried up.

It happened that the father of my friends who lived in Michigan had the power of divining and always used a willow or witching crotch or wand so my friends thought it might be that the power was handed down to the boys, so one afternoon I asked them if I try my hand.

We wandered all over the half section and were on the point of giving up when I felt my wand pulled down to the ground and I mouth. could not prevent it. I called my friends and they tried over the same place but of no avail.

Next morning they started digging. First two feet of snow then through four or five feet of frozen ground and at 12 feet they struck a stream of water that gave them all the water they could use.

I have divined several wells since then, one on my homestead the same winter as the 12-foot one. I got water at 35 feet and the water is 15 feet deep and the very best of water.

I got a well last spring for a farmer who had dug wells without success, he now has a good well. I have found that I can almost tell the depth to within a foot or two how deep the water is.

Greeks Starving

Editor, Bulletin: That was a dreadful story from Cairo by AP-a by Edward Kennedy, in the Bulletin of May 30, intimating that "Three hundred thousand Greeks, living on the German-occupied Aegian islands of Samos, Mitylene, Chios and Nikaria, are so close to starvation that rice is spreading among them, and they are being driven to invade Turkey, a report to Ralph Bain, head of the American Red Cross in the Middle East, said last night. The people are living mainly on herba which are rapidly drying up under the hot summer sun."

To my mind the fate of these poor and inoffensive folk deserves unusual treatment and unorthodox measures by the United Nations, if they are not to perish beneath the pincher pressure of famine and pestilence. In terms of food responsibility, of course, the duty is clearly on the Axis invaders. On the other hand, the entire record of the brutal Hun indicates that self-interest alone dictates his policy among the conquered peoples of Europe. He will maintain life in the civil populations under his control only to the extent that services can be rendered in the factories and in the fields—production of food and fibre to be shipped to Germany.

It is the very slight industrial or agricultural aid which can be expected from these poor Greek islanders, under whatsoever conditions, that puts the plight of these people in the most dangerous class of all, i.e., in no position to aid the conquerors (other than the misfortune to have got in the way of aggressors!) and absolutely dependent upon their respect for international law, of which the Nazis have little, or their sense of humanity, of which they have less!

Says Prof. Gilbert Jackson (McGill) in this same food connection: "We had 400 million customers in Europe . . . But when this war ends, they will not only be impoverished—they will be starving, riddled by diseases of malnutrition; and in all probability leaderless . . ."

I am convinced that every pound of food and fibre in our North American bins and stockpiles will be needed after the exit cause of Hitlersim has been lifted from our age" (Churchill). The time to plan is its distribution. Is getting it? Will remember "surpluses" is futile. PAT.

Some Consolation

Editor, Bulletin: A recent letter from "Get Wise Girls" complains bitterly over the fact that Canadian soldiers are marrying girls in England at the rate of 400 a month. As a matter of fact, a recent CBC news broadcast gave the figure as 600 per month.

I see no reason why Canadian soldiers should not marry England girls if they wish. I would assume most of them are old enough to know what they are doing. Perhaps the boys are living mainly on how they were two-timed when they lived in Canada.

However, Get Wise Girls may enjoy some consolation from the fact that there are still plenty of eligible young men left in Canada who are waiting for the "right one."

WISHING THE BOYS LUCK.

District Always Fetes Elderly Folk

By Neighbors On Her Birthday

RIMBEY — Out Rimbey way the elderly people always come in for their full share of homage when it comes to anniversaries, particularly birthdays.

Mrs. Armintha Gwin, 85, who has the distinction of having her birthday fall on June 8—the date on which the birthday of His Majesty the King is observed—was honored recently when more than 50 guests met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Grinde to help her celebrate the occasion.

A quilting club of the neighborhood presented her with a large box of chocolates, and another group made the gift of a fruit cake.

Cake mixing is the only household duty that Mrs. Gwin can not perform easily—it tires her arm to beat up heavy batter such as a fruit cake requires—but in every other line of household duties she is capable. She resides on a farm with her son William. Her husband, who was one of Rimbey's earliest settlers died several years ago.

Of the many who attended the birthday party, several families have been Mrs. Gwin's neighbors for 42 years. Two of these, octogenarians also, are Benjamin Rimbey and Thomas A. Iddings. Mr. Iddings made the formal presentation of gifts to Mrs. Gwin.

Fifteen of the 30 Life Masters in the country took part, and the championship went to the Philadelphia team consisting of Mrs. R. C. Young, Charles H. Goren, Mrs. Benjamin M. Golder and Charles J. Solomon.

Mrs. Young demonstrated her skill in the hand shown today. On the opening lead dummy played the Jack of spades, but East played low and the king fell. Mrs. Young, sitting South, led a low heart and the ten forced the ace. A spade return put out Mrs. Young's last stopper. A second heart lead was won by the jack and then the king was cashed. When the suit failed to split, Mrs. Young led the fourth heart anyhow, as the only chance was to find West with the club king and no more spades.

West exited with a diamond; the trick won and declarer cashed the two tops. Then the ace of clubs followed by a low club, which South did not cover. After a few tricks, but he had to give Mrs. Young the queen for her ninth trick.

British Expert At Meeting Of Agriculturists

OLDS, June 16.—(CP)—Prof. James A. Scott Watson, recently appointed attache to the British embassy at Washington and agricultural advisor to the high commissioner for the United Kingdom in Canada, will address the annual meetings of two agricultural associations here this week.

Prof. Scott Watson, a leading figure in British agriculture and conceded to combine to a high degree a wide knowledge of both practice and theory, will talk before the Canadian Seed Growers' Association which meets today and Wednesday and the Canadian Society of Technical Agriculturists which meets Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

FIRST APPOINTMENT

Prof. Scott Watson's appointment to the Washington embassy was the first of such appointments in the British diplomatic service and was reported to be a source of great satisfaction to English agriculture.

E. L. Eaton of Upper Canard, N.S., as president, will preside at the seed growers' convention. E. K. Hampson of Hamilton, Ont., president of the Technical Agriculturists, will head the delegates to that convention.

Premier Aberhart will speak before a joint meeting of both conventions Wednesday night when the provincial government will entertain delegates at a banquet.

Delegates to the seed growers will represent about 5,000 members in all provinces.

Membership in the technical agriculturists is composed of technically-trained men on the staffs of the departments of agriculture in provincial and federal governments, agricultural schools and colleges, experimental farms and commercial concerns and totals about 1,200. Some delegates are members of both organizations.

TO STUDY PROBLEMS

Agricultural problems growing out of present war conditions will be the main theme on the programs of both organizations.

Other meetings being held simultaneously are of the Canadian Society of Agricultural Economists, the Canadian Society of Animal Production (western section), the Canadian Phytopathological Society (Alberta group), and the Western Canadian Society of Agronomy.

Jasper Park Lodge Opens Doors For Season Of 1942

JASPER PARK LODGE, June 16. —With between 700 and 800 delegates to the 73rd annual meeting of the Canadian Bankers' Association on hand, this internationally-known mountain resort officially opened its doors to guests on Monday morning. It was the largest opening in the history of the Lodge.

One of many features of interest to the guests was the golf course, and the numbers playing yesterday gave ample reminiscent of the Totem Pole Golf Week. The course is in excellent condition, and the pro, Bill Brinkworth, and his assistant, Jack Cunningham, have been busy meeting old friends. As usual the flowers in the beds and the Lodge interior have attracted more than passing mention, as Jasper is especially noted for its extraordinarily beautiful floriculture. Bells which made such an impression during the Royal Visit in 1939, the Lodge will remain open until Aug. 31.

Price Board To Maintain Supply Necessary Food

OTTAWA, June 16.—(CP)—The Wartime Prices and Trade board is prepared to maintain supplies of necessary foods "by price adjustments or other means," Donald Gordon, chairman of the board said last night.

The board chairman declared the board is duty concerned in maintaining supplies of certain products running short. We may have to regulate the situation by price adjustments or other means, but we do not propose to adjust prices unless it is clearly in the national interest and we are determined to hold the general price ceiling.

Northern Boats Plying Peace As Rivermen Facing Active Season

PEACE RIVER—There is much activity on the river here at present with boats doing capacity business on the tricky runs.

Earlier this month the new 135 H.P. diesel stern wheel ferry boat left pushing the huge scow for use as a ferry at Taylor Flats. The stern-wheeler had to battle a fast-running river carrying debris with J. Douglas Cadenhead as skipper. Skipper Cadenhead, veteran of 30 years on the river and skipper of the Mackenzie riverboat Wesmuse, off the motor.

was loaned for the hard trip to the headwaters.

The new outfit was built by George Askew of Vancouver, river-boat builder who 25 years ago assembled and put into service the first paddle-wheeler on the Peace, the big steamer D. A. Thomas.

The O'Sullivan boat arrived here earlier this month from Fort Vermilion with a load of hogs. The one-way trip required six days owing to damage which occurred to the rudders when a log floated under the motorboat and screw. The skipper saved the propeller by turning

From Cars to BATTLE WAGGONS

Canadian genius for mass production is now being applied with telling results to the output of motorized war equipment.

Production figures are already fantastic. Since the beginning of the war, Canada has produced and shipped to the battlefields of the world more than 250,000 military vehicles. Production is now at the rate of one unit every three minutes and is constantly mounting.

Canadian fighting men need 160 different types of motorized equipment. Canada is producing all of them.

One plant alone is turning out in a single day enough Universal Carriers to equip two battalions. Heavy tanks, with 25,000 parts, are in mass production and, at one plant, are coming off the assembly line at the rate of one every few hours.

This advertisement is published as a contribution to the general knowledge of our country's war effort and as an inspiration through the days ahead. For reasons of security complete figures are not available. The facts presented, however, are impressive evidence of the growing might of Canada's war machine.

Bill Cunningham's Column

BILL BIDS BON VOYAGE TO SPICY JIMMY FOXX

NEW YORK, June 16.—He may be grey around the muzzle in his general get-around. Maybe his eyes aren't as keen as they used to be when that fast one roars in like a white ball of fur or that dipsy-do hangs out there fluttering like a startled butterfly. Maybe he's starting to run bases like a patriarchal penguin suddenly given the hot foot, and he might even stumble over his beard going in for a hunt.

But just the same, when Jimmy Foxx changed leagues to become a Chicago Cub. 90 per cent of the personality of the Red Sox was checking out of Fenway Park. Most of that ball club is as colorless as the belly of a fish. Jimmy always had more than a can of striped paint. Color is a precious ingredient. It is, at least, to the gentlemen who have to write stories. There isn't much of a tale in a cold boiled potato. Neither is there in a prim, proper and generally penurious prevaricationist.

That eminent medical author, Dr. Logan Clendening, just about said it when writing upon the subject of cocktailing and highballing, within reasonable limits, of course. Said the doctor, of the teetotaler, "I am prepared to applaud him, but avoid him."

FOXX EXACT OPPOSITE OF GREAT LEFTY GROVE

That's the way it is, too, with colorless athletes, but that's not the way it is with the occasional—the very occasional — Jimmy Foxx. There's a guy it's really fun to be around, and would still be fun to be around if he'd never smote a baseball. The moralists, one supposes, could, and probably would, be quite a corrective scenario on his career, and they'd have the perfect contrast to set against it in the other great star whose career will be bracketed with Jimmy's in the permanent diamond lore of this era—Lefty Grove.

It wouldn't be a question of morals, as morals. Both are family men. That section is solid. It wouldn't be the matter of morals, but the matter of money, the question of which is the wiser to live the high life. By all the accepted precepts, Grove has been much the wiser, and is due to have the world at future. Jimmy is a thousand miles ahead of him in living to date, but they'd say it's the story of the hare and the tortoise.

Both went into big money at about the same time and earned approximately the same amounts. Grove is the older, but it likewise took him longer to get started. Their origins were about even-stephen. Lefty was a gawking mountineer who wasn't even too certain what shoes were for starting out. James was a Polish kid with an unspellable name who came originally off a farm in the same general district.

LEFTY REPUTED TO HAVE QUARTER-MILLION

When both became stars, their stories split sharply along lines of personal procedure. Grove had married his smalltown sweetheart, his family was coming along, and he started digging himself in solidly in a small community. Jimmy married a beautiful dancer and he proceeded to surround her with beautiful things. As Lefty's salary soared upward into heavy metal, he socked it away in government bonds of which he's understood to have a quarter of a million dollars' worth.

He has never been tight, as some ball players are tight, with his shekels, especially where his family is concerned, but he kept the same house in the same town, enlarging it a little as the family grew.

As the opportunities developed in that home town, concerning, he bought into this or that establishment, the operation of which he felt he could understand. Bowling alleys are his specialty. He owns the best in the town and they're making money. He put his children through college, took his mama to Florida for the spring sessions.

JIMMY'S INTERESTS LAY IN DIFFERENT DIRECTION

The future holds no terrors for him. He's back in Lonaconing with his local businesses and his investments. Recent reports had him hoeing away at the weeds in a big vegetable garden, and very proud of the way his truck was coming along. That's a sweet success story of the sort to elle to the young.

Jimmy's split off the other way. When he got into the chips, he moved his family into a fine home in Philadelphia and went in for player pianos and oriental rugs. He's the lad who had the automobiles, the diamond rings, who liked the shows, the dances, the brightly lighted places.

Lefty went to bed at 10 o'clock, and got up at 6 in that cold shower singing and snorting every morning. These matutinal ablutions were being celebrated occasionally just as James was getting in.

CRONIN STRICT BUT NO DOUBT KNEW FOXX

Some of these occasions, Manager Cronin would be professionally furious. I say "professionally" because it always appeared to me that Joseph Cronin, Jim, constituted as he was, was better, happier and more relaxed for an occasional evening of dancing and fooling around with good friends. But the manager, of course, had to be professionally stern. Sometimes it was even pretty funny.

I remember a night in Sarasota when a lot of sports writers, their wives and some of the local toffs made an entire night of it in one of the local asylums, nicking up Mr. Foxx somewhere en route. Some stout pigeon squawked and Cronin grew stern.

The opposition of that particular day was to be Louisville, and the Sox regulars were to have the day off. But this changed the orders so far as Foxx was concerned. He was ordered to report for morning practice and then play first base in the ball game. So far as I know, he didn't even go to bed.

There wasn't a word of squawk from him, as he did double duty, and on that particular ball game he hit three home runs!

BUSINESS VENTURE PROVES DISASTROUS

Jim finally made his big business connection. It was a big, fancy and ambitious, constituting the purchase of a well-known golf course in St. Petersburg, Fla., which was to be a winter paradise for all sportsmen. The sad summary of this all is that he simply lost his shirt. Everything conspired to lick him—the war, the freezing of cars, the stop on tires and gas, the collapse of the vacation business.

Now for $10,000—he cost exactly $10—times that just six years ago—he moves to a new town, a new town, a new league, a new chance. No ball player ever left more friends and sincere well wishers behind him, both on his old team and off it. No National Leaguer will have more American Leaguers pulling for him, and since he still has some years, and those big wrists of his, there's a chance that he'll bang those fences until they think the Japs are coming over.

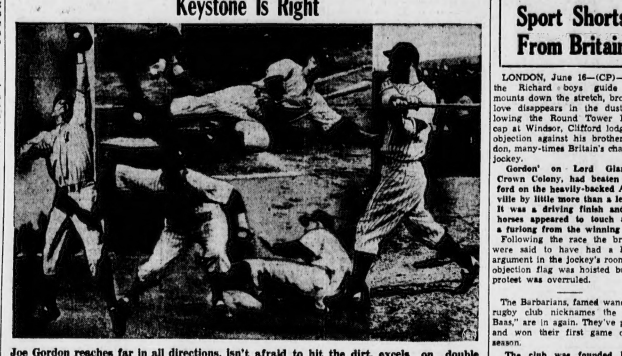

Here's a hope that he does. He's quite a guy.

Keystone Is Right

Joe Gordon reaches far in all directions, isn't afraid to hit the dirt, excels on double plays and throws from any position and hits a long ball in compiling remarkable batting streaks.

Majors Easier Than Football

Bigger Bat Makes Gordon Greater Menace Than Ever

By HARRY GRAYSON

NEW YORK, June 16.—Joseph Lowell Gordon's batting average zooming from his .276 of last season to .395 in the midst of a phenomenal consecutive game hitting streak easily makes the Oregon Short Line the greatest ball player of the day.

Joe Gordon was considered one of the top second basemen of all time almost from the day he broke in with the Yankees.

How come the rapid rise in the assault and battery department?

"Well, I'm watching the ball better for one thing," says the Oregon alumnus, "and then one day I accidentally picked up a heavier, bigger and longer bat. It's a Keller model, you see, but it's really a Rudy York model. Joe DiMaggio adopted it first and then Charley Keller. It's three pounds heavier than the one I previously used, two inches longer. I nail that outside pitch with it."

Gordon switched from shortstop to second base when he moved from the Oakland Coasters to Newark for his second year in professional ball. He did this at the suggestion of the far-seeing Yankee front office.

Tony Lazzeri was on his last legs. Ed Barrow sought a replacement and, working with the Yankees at St. Petersburg in the spring of 1937, Gordon convinced Joe McCarthy that he was the man.

CONSIDERS SECOND BASE EASIER THAN SHORTSTOP

Modest Joe Gordon is thankful that the cards called for the change. He professes to believe second base is easier to patrol than shortstop, although Charley Gehringer and other past masters of the Keystone argue to the contrary.

Scout Bill Essick signed Gordon for the New Yorks when he was a junior at the University of Oregon, which finally graduated the young man who currently is the backbone of the world champions in '38, with a Bachelor of Science degree in Physical Education. The scholarly Gordon finished his education after going to the baseball wars.

Gordon likes to tell you that he found crashing the American League easier than making the Oregon football team.

He was the running mate of Bobby Grayson, who went on to play a little football at Stanford, on a remarkable Jefferson High School team in Portland, Ore. He broad jumped 21 feet.

Gordon played freshman football at Eugene, but the Lemon-Yellow was well loaded with backs in his sophomore year, so he was denied an athletic scholarship, probably because he weighed no more than 140 pounds.

The result was that Gordon did not go out for football as a sophomore.

YANKS KEEP FLEET GORDON OUT OF COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Gordon's weight jumped to 155 pounds as a junior, when Prink Callison had use for him and offered the boy a scholarship, but Bill Essick beat the coach to the punch.

Forager Essick had trailed Shortstop Gordon in high school, at Oregon and on the sandlots, offered him a bonus that would see him through college provided he did not play football.

Gordon, standing 5 feet 10, weighs 175 pounds today. He guesses that he could run 100 yards in baseball shoes in 11 seconds, but anybody who has hit a ball in his direction will testify that he is faster than that.

Unhampered by football injuries, Joe Gordon, only 27, is the perfect Yankee—arm, power, speed, disposition, deportment and sound as the Minnesota line.

Sport Shorts From Britain

LONDON, June 16—(CP)—When the Richard boys guide their mounts down the stretch, brotherly love disappears in the dust. Following the Round Tower Handicap at Windsor, Clifford lodged an objection against his brother Gordon, many-times Britain's champion jockey.

Gordon' on Lord Glanely's Crown Colony, had beaten Clifford on the heavily-backed Abbeville by little more than a length. It was a driving finish and the horses appeared to touch about a furlong from the winning post.

Following the race the brothers were said to have had a heated argument in the jockey's room. The objection flag was hoisted but the protest was overruled.

The Barbarians, famed wandering rugby club nicknames the "Baa-Baas," are in again. They've played and won their first game of the season.

The club was founded by a select band of rugger enthusiasts at an oyster supper at Bradford in 1890. Since then it has been the ambition of every ruggerite to be invited to wear the Barbarians' famed black-and-white jerseys with monogram, and to have the privilege of wearing the "Baa-Baas" tie of Oxford and Cambridge blue with a white stripe between the blues.

The war has hit hard at the Barbarians' ranks. Since September, 1939, at least 10 "Baa-Baas" and International rugbyists have died or been killed on active service. Several others are prisoners of war.

It was mighty exciting when girl employees of two factories met in a football game—so exciting, in fact, that an appeal has gone out for sets of football boots and shin guards for the return match. It seems the gals played in gymnasium slippers and several were hurt. There was many a sore toe and one girl was carried off with a sprained ankle.

Three mobile kitchens, containing everything from soup plates to floor mops, were presented by the Canadian Ladies' Golf Union to the Women's Volunteer Service for Civil Defence.

Larry Nicholas Constantine, West Indies Negro who was the highest-paid professional cricket player in Britain before the war, is now welfare officer in the labor ministry. He looks after the comforts of 400 highly-skilled West Indian negro workers.

Former British lightweight champion, Cpl. Dave Crowley was kayoed by a fellow RAFer, AC. Jackie Rankin in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round bout at London. The old "one-two" finished Crowley.

Ask 30 Per Cent. Boost In Purses

BOSTON, June 16.—(AP)—The first horsemen's strike in the 10-year-old history of New England's pari-mutuel racing—a strike over demands for increases in all purses—Monday resulted in the cancellation of today's eight-race program at Suffolk Downs.

That action resulted when only eight of the 1,000-odd thoroughbreds quartered at the track, representing almost 200 different owners, were designated as starters in today's overnight events.

Earlier a group of owners and trainers, who had identified themselves as "horsemen of Suffolk Downs," presented a petition to Charles F. Adams, president of the Eastern Racing Association, that called for a 20-per-cent increase in all purses for the duration of the 60-day meeting, which reached its halfway mark last Saturday.

Adams said:

"I told the representatives of the horsemen that 'we are willing to go part of the way with you but we can't go all the way. We are doing all we can afford to do for we cannot forefell what the future has in store for taxation and transportation and we could not make promises that we might not be able to keep'."

Later three owner-trainers, Johnny McDowell, Phil Bieber and Harold Simmons, who acted as spokesman for the horsemen, notified Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan that they had revised their demand to a minimum purse of $1,200 instead of $1,000 for the rest of the meeting.

In their petition to Adams, the horsemen pointed out that the upkeep of horses had increased "far in excess of 30 per cent" and that they were unable to make both ends meet even under the most favorable conditions. They also pointed out that the Suffolk Downs' handle for the first half of its 1942 meeting totalled $15,055,735, an increase of $1,938,707 over that same period last year.

The horsemen have been assured by the jockeys that they will not accept any mounts until the owners and trainers have settled their differences with the management. The track grooms also have agreed to refuse to lead any more horses from the stables to the paddock until then.

Harness Racing Staging Comeback

WINNIPEG, June 16—(CP)—Perhaps gasoline and tire rationing has led to more than casual interest in the horse. It seems harness racing is staging a comeback on the Canadian prairies.

Three decades ago nearly every small prairie town had its race-track. The general store, the livery barn or the poolroom might go unpainted but the track was kept spic and span. Then, gradually, the automobile pushed the horse into disfavor. Could it be the shoe is now on the other hoof? Officials report increased interest in the western harness circuit opening this week at Pilot Mound, Man.

There will be meets at Deloraine, Carman and Brandon before the horses move into Saskatchewan July 9 for a three-day meet at Moose Jaw. Not satisfied with publicizing the harness racers, the Moose Jaw exhibition will feature daily displays by the High Park Riding Club.

Cigarette Fund Game Saturday

Old Timers Almost Ready For Battle Against Dodgers

Just to put a few finishing touches on his Old Timers in preparation for the Cosmopolitan Club's cigarette fund game against Cal Pickles' Dodgers next Saturday, Norman Dodge has called a final workout for Thursday night.

The practice will be held at the Golf Links diamond, which is just west of the high level bridge and those who have already attended workouts along with any others desiring to play are invited to turn out.

Incidentally Norman has the signed contracts in hand for the three base umpires for Saturday's game. Adam Esch, Frank Drayton and Louis Podersky having volunteered to attend to that phase of the situation. The umpire-in-chief will be named by the senior baseball league officials.

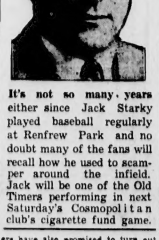

And Pat O'Hunter has promised to take along his training kit and will be on the job with Andrew Park from 6 o'clock on. Pat has undertaken to keep to an absolute minimum charley horses and sparing.

No statement has been forthcoming to date as to the probable lineup for the big game, but it is understood that the team will be able to furnish plenty of opposition for the Dodgers.

In addition to players previously mentioned there is a possibility that Glen Wilkie, pitcher for the Cubs when they won the inter-provincial championship a few years back will offer up a few slants for the occasion.

Dick Speer, coach of the Arrows and who in his hey-day star southpaw for the Detroit Tigers in the American League will do mound duty for a couple of innings, so the rumor goes.

Ken Crosier and Bobby Cearuti-

It's not so many years either since Jack Starky played baseball regularly at Renfrew Park and no doubt many of the fans will recall how he used to scamper around the infield. Jack will be one of the Old Timers performing in next Saturday's Cosmopolitan club's cigarette fund game.

ers have also promised to turn out for the game.

Hassett's Batting Success Again Shows Luck Of Yankees

NEW YORK, June 16.—John Aloysius Hassett's batting streak and yipping success at first base further convinces American League rivals of the luck of the Yankees.

"If I were Joe McCarthy," says Bucky Harris of Washington, "I wouldn't even bother to go to the park. I'd stay at the hotel and call up now and then to get the score."

Buddy Hassett wasn't good enough for the Boston Braves. He looked worse than that in spring training. Ed Barrow gave up on him. Ed Levy started the season at first base.

Yet when Hassett, the Bronx thrush, stretched his consecutive game batting streak to 19 with a two-bagger to centre scoring Frank Crosetti in the eighth inning of the nightcap of the doubleheader with Cleveland, 73,238 spectators let out a roar comparable to the thunder that accialimed Joe DiMaggio's new record of 1941, when the great outfielder went on to 56 games.

Playing the slickest first base in the American League, Hassett has played a big part in the Yankees' 69 double plays.

By this time other clubs are positive that if Joe McCarthy reached in a grab bag and come up with Sound Policy, he would immediately become a Tris Speaker.

They are sure Ernie Lombardi, in New York livery, could be employed at a pinch runner.

Even Buddy Hassett has it with the Yankees.

Girls' Sports Outlook

By SUSIE Q

A somewhat unusual softball story comes from Los Angeles, that in a game there only enough girls appeared to make up one of the teams and with no substitute, the pitching of that team was not meeting with very much approval from the fans or her team. She had given 14 walks and only because of super efforts of her mates did they appear at bat in the last of the ninth with the score 6-3 against them. It was Miss Williams' fate, if it could be called that, to com: to bat as dozens of fans were handling their sunshades (the word umbrella is taboo in that city) on their exit from the grounds; the batboy picking up the extra bats; two out; the bases full.

Possibly disgusted with her pitching display, maybe now thoroughly angry and aroused, she let the first ball go through for a strike, and then as the second came near she made one big effort for an over-the-left-fence which of course, under the rules, gave her team the win. Immediately the diamond was crowded with congratulating friends but Miss Williams had come back to home plate and fallen there, crying and almost in hysterics. Another of those proofs that you can't always state the result in a ball game until the last batter is out.

There is a story of milk in a print shop not so many miles away from our desk which we may detail publicly some day when we are looking for a 50-50 revenge for certain bantering we have had to take from that print shop staff. In the meantime, a Wetaskiwin printshop, maybe having read of our use of the term "elementary geometry" at a track meet the other day, sends us a story involving "higher mathematics."

The story refers to milk having been purchased by housewives in that city for five cents per pint until a government order came out raising the price to six cents per pint and that the dairyman should have 28 cents per hundred pounds, additional. There being about 79 pints in the hundred pounds, the consumer ponders the question, "who gets the remainder?" This brings to our mind that mentioned word "sucker" and also the once-upon-a-time song title, "Aren't We All." Maybe some of our girl student-athletes can give us a solution, keeping in mind that the consumer foots the bill. The Wetaskiwin comment is that "it all does not make cents."

Phyllis Griffiths writes some complimentary words in the Toronto Telegram about our Edmonton scoring official, Miss Margaret Gray, and also our junior track athlete, Miss Edith Skitch.

Noting the number of folks occupying the gallery at the swimming pool we were at the other evening, we think that the city fathers missed a financial revenue chance in not making an admission charge.

Calgary sends out a little story about Hal Straight, sports writer of Vancouver, that we cannot resist the temptation to repeat here: The story goes that Hal a fishing went once upon a time and taking a frog away from a water snake to use as bait, giving the snake a shot of rye in exchange The last verse or stanza:

About an hour later
A splash beside the log
There was my friend the water snake
Bringing another frog.

Forgive us this time, won't you?

"What with distemper in the kennels and four shows coming up, I don't see how I can squeeze in my wedding this month!"

Crop Development In Saskatchewan Is Declared Good

REGINA, June 16 — (CP) — Although some exceptions exist, crops on the whole have developed satisfactorily during the past two weeks according to reports received by the statistics branch of the Saskatchewan department of agriculture.

At most points growth of wheat and coarse grains has been good and stands are generally promising with an average height of from 5 to 7 inches.

Grasshoppers continue to hatch slowly, reports state, chiefly in the south central and central portions of the province. Insofar as local outbreaks, however, have yet occurred and very little baiting has been undertaken so far.

Hagen, captain of all six American teams of picked professional stars that met Great Britain before war interrupted the series, said Lawson Little of San Francisco and Henry Picard would be key men in the challenger front.

Racing To Continue At Saratoga Despite Outlook

By JACK GUENTHER

NEW YORK, June 16—(BUP)—The turf communique bears the happy tidings that the proposed black-out of Saratoga has been voted down. The blue-blooded, red-nosed bosses of the picture book playground in upstate New York have agreed upon a business as usual policy. For the summer, at least, the biggest racing show on earth will go on—they hope.

There isn't much they can do except hope. For once, the success or failure of their meeting at the tree-fringed track which dates back to civil war days won't depend on rich purses, glamor horses or low admission prices. Instead, it will be settled by the railroads. If trains keep running, the spa will prosper and flatten. If not, well, who knows?

The situation is tinged with irony. There are a greater number of horses in training now than ever before. There are a greater number of customers and these customers are weighted down with ready cash. But the ways and means of bringing the customers and the thoroughbreds together are fast disappearing. The automobile is gone; the special trains are going.

EVERY TRACK AFFECTED

Saratoga isn't alone in this misery. Every track in Canada and the United States is faced with the same feast or famine proposition. Unlike ball parks and boxing arenas, they are not readily accessible. They lie anywhere from four to 28 miles from the centre of their mother cities. The average would be approximately seven miles — something more than walking distance.

Col. Matt Winn holds that the Colts will always get to the Kentucky Derby, even if they must trawl. His situation, however, is exceptional. The Derby is America's greatest race and Louisville is a major city. If necessary, the townfolk could support the bluegrass epic themselves. Churchill Downs is only four miles away from city hall, and may be reached by street car.

Other tracks are not so fortunate. In Chicago, for instance, distance is a critical factor. John Jackson, manager of Arlington and Washington parks, told me that as long as the railroads ran his tracks would thrive—no longer. In Florida, many observers doubt that there will be a 1942-43 winter season. In Maryland, only Pimlico is reasonably close to the customers. In Canada it's business as usual, with an increased attendance at all tracks.

PUNTERS CAME 125 MILES

The case of Saratoga is particularly unfortunate. In theory, the spa is supported by local clientele. Actually, it draws heavily from the metropolitan areas of New York city—125 miles away. That is, it did draw heavily. This season, the Vanderbilts and Whitneys will have to spot it. If they don't the mutuel windows' fate rests with the home folks.

The three-gallons-a-week limit on gasoline along the eastern coast eliminates week-end jaunts to the spa. A round trip from New York requires 20-25 gallons, and quantity such as that is fabulous in these times. Automobiles are definitely out. The railroads have complicates the situation by announcing the special trains will be eliminated, too.

George Bull, the ruddy, roly-poly head of Saratoga, was given only two choices. The first, which he and his associates accepted, was to plug ahead despite difficulties. The second, which they forcefully rejected, was to shift their meeting-lock, stock and pinto finish cans—to Belmont park. They decided to choose sentiment rather than realism.

PREFERRED TRADITION

A Saratoga meeting at Belmont wouldn't be quite the same, but what is these days? Bull and his mates would have made a profit—the recent Belmont run hit a new world record of approximately $1,200,000 per day—and the lengthy transfer of horses would have been unnecessary. But they preferred tradition to certain success—wisely or not.

Actually, Saratoga is all tradition. The trip is hot and dusty, the local merchants make all their profit from the tourists in one month and the only entertainment available—aside from gambling on horses—must be obtained at a stream-lined and high-powered night clubs on the out-skirts of town. It isn't easy fun, in any sense, and it isn't cheap.

But to thousands, the visit is worth the cost in money, time and nervous energy. Or—again keeping the chronological elements in order—the visit was worth it. For there are limits to everything, including tradition. Saratoga has survived three wars and will survive a fourth, but not, I hope, at the expense of gasoline and trains which could be put to better use in better places.

Sports .... Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK, June 16—(AP)—After seeing the latest reports on the Hale America tournament, this corner has come around to the idea that the brassie brasshats knew what they were doing when they cancelled this year's regular championships . . . By junking the traditional tournaments and all their rules, they have been able to whoop it up for one big event that will bring in some real dough for the United States Organizations and Navy Relief . . . Tipoff on how good a show they put on in that carnival at the Polo Grounds yesterday was that Francis Albertanti, who handled the publicity, bought himself a ticket. He claimed it was the first time he ever had paid for admission to any show.

Monday Matinee—

Dolph Camilli, father of five children, has been chosen as "the outstanding father in sports for 1942" . . . What's the matter with that Can-Am league umpire who has 23? . . . When Johnny Addie, the golden-voiced right announcer at the Bronx Coliseum, couldn't get the fans' attention the other night, he started to sing the Star Spangled Banner.

Lost and Found—

Tub thumper George Strickler reports that auditors rummaging around the National Football League office recently discovered 36 complete forward passes that had been lost in moving the records from Dayton, O., to Chicago. They belonged to Sammy Baugh and the discovery gave him the league record of 414 completions, four more than Arnie Heber.

Canadian-American League ball clubs complain that when they play in Canada they have to use balls made in the Dominion, which aren't nearly as lively as the home brand.

Sportsmention—

Dick Sisler, who was only a year old when his dad, George, edged out Ty Cobb for the American League batting title with a record .4196 in 1922, is hitting around .400 for the Ashville, N.C., tourists . . . and he wishes fans would stop comparing him with his pop as a hitter and first baseman.

Cleaning the Cuff—

A Chicago paper reports that the largest crowd in Tennis history is estimated at 52,237—saw a match in last week's Illinois state tournament. The stands held 138 and the rest were passengers on elevated trains passing the court.

"Double X" Helps Cubs To Victory

BROOKLYN, June 16.—(AP)—The moral of this piece is: Never throw a bean ball at Claude Passeau. One of those slants tossed by Hugh Casey just about two years ago got Claude so steamed up he's been taking it out on the Dodgers ever since, and getting a lot of laughs out of it.

Claude was so peeved that afternoon at Wrigley field that he started to take on the whole Brooklyn ball club, bare-knuckles. He was punched around somewhat by Joe Gallagher, of whom you may have heard.

These antics shocked National League President Ford Frick so that he pinned a $75 fine on the Chicago Cubs' ace elbower.

Ever since then, the man from Millsaps—that's no reflection, it's just Claude's college—has been taking that "six bits" out o Is Shylock. In the course of two years, he's knocked off the Bums seven times and dropped only two to them.

Right now, he's pretty warm for June, or any other month for that matter. He hasn't been beaten since May 5. So last evening, Manager Jimmy Wilson, his old pal and colleague from the Phillies, asked him to go out there against the Brooklyns in a twilight game—the first big league game, incidentally, ever to start in daylight and end under the arcs.

"Them Bums," Passeau shrugged —"Why, they're my cousins."

What he did to the league leaders made the relationship seem even closer than that. He served up a five-hitter and he didn't let a Dodger get past second. In fact, only two got a ride as far as that on the line. And with the help of some fair country clouting by Lou Novikoff, Bill Nicholson and James Double-X Foxx he waltzed home with a 6-0 decision.

This win moved the Cubs up into fifth place in the loop, and dropped the Pittsburgh Pirates into Sixth.

SCHUMACHER STOPS PIRATES

PITTSBURGH, June 16—(AP)—The help of Babe Barna's booming bat and Hal Schumacher's air-tight elbowing, New York Giants thumped the Pirates 6-2 Monday and split their current series at two games apiece.

Barna knocked in one run in the fourth inning with a triple and sent two more over in the ninth with his second homer of the year. He also helped along a run-making rally in the eighth with a two-bagger. Schumacher handcuffed the Bucs with two hits for seven innings, then eased up and coasted in with a seven-hitter for his fourth victory of the season.

Altogether, the Giants tagged Max Butcher and Ken Heintzelman for 13 hits, among them Manager Mel Ott's eighth roundtrip wallop of the year in the ninth inning.

Ol' Diz Breezes Over A Fast One

ST. LOUIS, June 16—He's still the same Ol' Diz. Radio broadcasters are forbidden to mention the weather, but leave it to the ingenuity of Jerome Herman Dean, now airing games here, to figure a way out of that restriction. When a recent game was interrupted by a downpour, the irrepressible Dizzy orated:

"Folks, over the air I ain't allowed to tell you why the umpires stopped the game, but if you-all will jus' go stick your heads out of the window, you'll find out."

Maternal Death Rate In Canada Drops Greatly

JASPER, June 16.—(CP)—Maternal mortality in Canada has decreased greatly, Dr. J. D. McQueen of Winnipeg said today in an address to the council of the Canadian Medical Association.

In 1930 the maternal death rate in the dominion was 5.8 per thousand living births, and for the first nine months in 1941 the death rate had fallen to 3.4 per thousand, he reported. He announced the committee on maternal mortality will shortly make available to the profession the minimum standards of pre-natal care.

Wing Commander Dr. F. F. Tisdall of Toronto said that 2½ million copies of the C.M.A. booklet, "Food in Peace and War" have been distributed in Canada.

Reading a report prepared by Dr. F. J. H. Campbell of London, Dr. George Hale, also of London, said that the medical schools in the dominion have been able to speed up graduation of doctors without in any way lowering standards. Summer vacations have been cut to enable the students to spend longer at their studies.

AFFECT HOSPITALS

War control measures have seriously affected the hospitals, Dr. Harvey Agnew of Toronto stated. "Earlier we were cut off entirely from rubber gloves and other necessary commodities, but Ottawa officials have been most co-operative in seeking that we are supplied with essentials."

It was decided in council that doctors who invent or originate medical or surgical instruments may protect their devices by obtaining patents. The professional code of ethics does not allow a physician to capitalize or market for personal gain any invention he makes. He is allowed, however, to turn over royalties to a corporate body such as a university for the prosecution of research.

The recommendation that doctors be allowed to protect their discoveries from unscrupulous persons was made by Dr. Ross M. Mitchell of Winnipeg.

Wheat Trading Is Uneventful

WINNIPEG, June 16—(CP)—Following an uneventful session on Winnipeg grain exchange today, the July wheat future remained unchanged at 80⅜ cents a bushel.

Interest centred on the export of about 375,000 bushels of Canadian wheat to Eire. This business was not reflected in the pit.

Plan To Enforce Seven-Day Week In Coast Yards

OTTAWA, June 16. — (CP) — Labor Minister Mitchell announced today that he plans to "proceed with the enforcement" of the seven-day week plan for continuous production of ships in Pacific coast yards, despite failure of two of 11 unions to accept the plan.

In a statement he said he "expected" that next Sunday "all British Columbia shipyard employees who are scheduled to work on that day will be at their stations."

There had been some talk that shortage of materials, lack of an adequate supply of skilled workers and supervisors made the seven-day week plan impracticable, Mr. Mitchell said. He had conferred with several of his cabinet colleagues, and with Elliott M. Little, director of National Selective Service. He wished to give assurance that such difficulties would not be allowed to stand in the way.

(When the seven-day week proposal was first advanced, nine of the 11 unions accepted it. Last week the boilermakers' union, with 7,400 members, also voted against the plan. Since then five unions have given approval of a joint trade union conference plan calling for a Sunday lay-off.

(Mr. Mitchell's statement did not mention these later developments specifically but it did refer to "some talk" that the seven-day plan was impracticable.)

"With the Japanese attacks on Alaska as further evidence that the war is approaching nearer to our west coast, the needs of the shipyards are paramount," Mr. Mitchell said.

"Men and materials will be secured even at the expense of production in other industries."

Medicos Can Aid In War Effort

JASPER, June 16.—(CP)—The medical profession can contribute markedly to the war effort by keeping industrial workers fit for their jobs, Dr. J. G. Cunningham of Toronto, told the council of the Canadian Medical Association here this morning.

The physician in industry and the family doctor can co-operate by giving guidance to interested employers who wish to establish better medical facilities for the workers, he explained.

Modern industrial medicine covers the study of industrial environment as well as care of minor complaints and early diagnosis in the case of disease.

Dr. Cunningham's recommendation that a committee be set up by the national research council to investigate such subjects as industrial fatigue and occupational diseases occasioned by war production, was ratified by the council.

Lord Strabolgi Urges Election

HULL, England, June 16.—(CP)—Lord Strabolgi in an address today advocated a general election and formation of "a constructive and patriotic opposition."

The Labor peer contended the present House of Commons is "stale" because it was elected seven years ago on issues that now are obsolete. He said the current lack of an alternative government is dangerous to the country.

He flew in a bomber raiding enemy territory.

Twice he was pitched into the Mediterranean from attacked ships.

He wasn't scratched.

Today he was nursing his first injury—two ribs broken when he slipped on a piece of soap in his bathtub.

BERNE, June 16.—(AP)—Use of the Polish language has been forbidden in Danzig and adjacent Polish territory annexed by Germany and named the district of "Danzig-West Prussia." Higher Taxes, More Rationing U.S. Prospect an arsenal greater than any known before; a navy larger than all the rest of the world's navies combined; the largest mechanized army in existence; an air force larger than the air forces of all other nations together; the largest merchant marine afloat; a synthetic rubber industry as large as the natural industry.

All this it is attempting to do in two or three years. By comparison the Russian Five Year Plan, the Nazi industrial revolution, every era of expansion in the past history of America are dwarfed by the present project. For the first time the process of mass production, invented in America, is to be used to the absolute ultimate without regard to cost, human convenience, or social consequences.

DRAIN ON MANPOWER

The most obvious effect of all this will be in the movement of the ordinary American into the armed forces. The present goal of the army, navy and air force is 9,000,000 men. There are 27,000,000 men in the country from 18 to 44 years of age, inclusive. Thus one of every three men in this large age group will be needed if the war lasts long and the ultimate goal of the fighting services is achieved.

The drain on manpower will be applied in stages as the services need recruits. There are some 3,000,000 men under arms now. This year about 2,000,000 more will be recruited in the army and air force, 250,000 for the navy. In 1943 at least 2,000,000 more will go into the army and at least 250,000 into the navy. In 1944, 1,500,000 will be required by the army in addition to replacements of battle casualties which, by then, may be large.

From these figures it is clear that the ordinary American, married and unmarried, between 18 and 44, has a good chance of seeing service in the war. Since older men in this group will be used as sparingly as possible a high proportion of able-bodied young men definitely are going into uniform.

While undertaking this war program, the United States will still try to maintain the highest living standard in the world, but this standard is dropping sharply. That is where most Americans will feel the war.

HEAT AND BATHS

The most painful effort for a people accustomed to ride instead of walking will be in the rationing of gasoline everywhere, and probably at a figure below that already fixed for Canadians. In Washington it is expected the government may have to requisition many private cars, particularly where an individual owns two, and use them in maintaining essential transportation.

The automobile carried Americans 200,000,000,000 passenger miles last year, or five times as far as railways and busses combined. It will be necessary to reduce the volume of motor transport a half. This means altering the daily habits of the entire population, virtually eliminating all forms of pleasure and non-essential driving.

Millions of Americans will live in chilly houses next winter if they heat with oil, for its use as a fuel must be reduced by a half in the East and Far West—a regulation which may be extended. The family thus affected will have to reduce its weekly quota of baths.

Housing is so over-taxed in some defense industry areas that the government may have to compel families with extra rooms to rent them to outsiders.

Rationing will spread from gasoline, sugar, tea, coffee, into many other lines, probably about 15 articles this year. Woolen clothing probably will be on the list replaced largely with plentiful cotton.

Taxes on the ordinary American must go up if inflation is to be avoided. The first step probably will be the collection of 10 percent of the income tax from wage cheques and the next step compulsory saving, which the price administration is demanding. Even then American taxes will be well below the Canadian level. Installment buying, already curbed, may be eliminated. Banks will compel borrowers to repay loans as rapidly as possible.

The profits of industry this year will break all records, totalling about $18,000,000,000 as against $6,785,000,000 last year. But after taxes are paid profits will be down to about $7,000,000,000. Dividends will be about half of the 1941 total of $4,500,000,000 as profits will be largely needed to expand plants. But while large industry is working to capacity, many small industries and a wide area of retail luxury business will be damaged or eliminated.

Labor will gain in strength because it is the policy of the government to encourage union organization. But if the price ceiling is to hold wages must be frozen and the government knows it. Evidently it is moving towards that policy as fast as it feels it can but not fast enough to suit the price administration.

All these are some of the immediate prospects in America's current revolution. Other changes in the American way of life many be necessitated by developments on the war fronts before the year is out. But the ultimate effect of this gigantic process on the future economic system of America, on the life of the ordinary American no one can yet guess. Clearly some of the changes in production methods, in financial methods, in social techniques can never be undone.

BOTH SIDES SILENT

Big Allied Planes Have Carried Out Secret Raids For Some Time

By DANA ADAMS SCHMIDT

ANKARA, Turkey, June 16.—(BUP)—Vichy French sources reported today that big Allied planes had been bombing Axis targets in southeastern Europe for several weeks before four United States army bombing planes landed in Turkey Friday.

Informants asserted that the raids had been made intermittently but that the Allies had remained silent regarding them, and the Axis commands in turn had decided to say nothing.

Allied military sources said there was but one clear point regarding the United States' plane raid—that there were plenty more big new United States bombers where the four which landed in Turkey had been based.

They said the bases would be kept secret in order to keep the Axis guessing.

Opinion here was still that the American planes had bombed the Rumanian oil fields.

MAPS REVEAL COURSE

Persons on the spot when three American planes landed at the civil airport here said that the hands of one airman were nearly frozen.

Maps in the planes revealed their course, it was asserted, but Turkish authorities now in charge of them refused to disclose it.

Witnesses said the commander of each plane distributed a considerable sum of money, taken from a steel box, to his men when they landed.

Under the name "Blue Goose" of one plane, it was said, the words "May God bless you" had been scratched in the varnish.

It was said that the planes and the crew uniforms were new and indicated that the raid was the first by a new unit.

The possibility was widely discussed that the United States might turn the bombers over to Turkey, recalling that in the last war Germany sold its battleship Goeben to Turkey after it had taken refuge in Turkish waters.

Today's War Moves

change, and it looks as though the long controversy over the effectiveness of battleships is about to be resolved. It is significant that Senator Ralph Brewster, of the U.S. naval affairs committee and of the special Senate committee investigating the American war program, said today that the U.S. navy has abandoned plans to build the five 60,000-ton super-battleships authorized by Congress.

The new $8,000,000,000 Vinson bill now before Congress authorizes the building of 500 new fighting ships totalling 1,900,000 tons, of which 500,000 tons would be devoted to aircraft carriers. Not a single battleship is provided for. Of the remaining tonnage, 500,000 would be devoted to light and heavy cruisers and 900,000 to destroyers and escort vessels.

SEVERAL CONVERTED

Depending on the size of carriers chosen by the navy, the program should provide between 20 and 30 of the vessels. The United States entered the war with seven carriers and 11 under construction. Since then, an undisclosed number of uncompleted ships has been converted into carriers.

Since the start of the war in the Pacific, air power has played the dominant role at sea. The Pearl Harbor debacle was executed by carrier-based planes. Aircraft sank the British battleships Prince of Wales and Repulse off Malaya.

In the battle of the Coral Sea, the Midway battle and now the battle of the Aleutian Islands, aircraft caused nearly all the damage. It is reported that in the battle of the Coral Sea, surface vessels did not make contact. It will not be surprising to find, when the facts of the engagement just reported by the Italians in the Mediterranean are known, that aircraft had the principal role.

A striking feature of the May and June battles in the Pacific has been the perfect co-ordination of the army, navy and marine air forces with the fleet. Land-based planes played a major part in conjunction with the carrier planes. The navy used land-based planes as well as the army and marine corps.

LONG RANGE BOMBERS

The combination was so effective that future battles in deep water beyond the range of land-based planes probably will be avoided. Even so, long range bombers may be developed that will make no waters inaccessible. Something of the sort is envisaged by Major Alexander De Seversky in his book, "Victory Through Air Power."

The air arm thus becomes no longer a mere auxiliary of a fleet, as it has hitherto been regarded by navy men. The entire concept of warfare at sea has been changed. The battleship, once regarded as supreme, will assume a subsidiary role. It may, in time, be abandoned.

Land troops still have to be transported and the transports need naval protection. The vulnerable carriers also need protection, notably against submarines and aircraft. It seems not improbable that cruisers, swift destroyers, torpedo craft and submarines will form the backbone of coming fleets.

French And Nazi Dye Trusts Form Joint Corporation

VICHY, June 16.—(AP)—The Laval government ratified a contract today whereby the powerful French and German dye trusts set up a joint company in which the Germans control 51 per cent. of the stock. The company, which will operate in France, will be known as Francolor Corporation and will be largely owned by the German I. G. Farbenindustrie of Frankfort.

Few Nazi Bombers Carry Out Raids

LONDON, June 16.—(CP)—A few German bombers were over southern and southwestern England during the night, causing some light damage and injuring a small number of people slightly, the Ministry of Home Security and the Air Ministry said in a joint communique.

Iron Discovered In Central Nova Scotia Mountains

TRURO, N.S., June 16. — (CP) — Iron ore with a metallic content of 65 per cent. has been discovered in central Nova Scotia in the Five Islands and Economy Mountain areas, Bernard Sky, northern Ontario mining and geological engineer, announced yesterday. Machinery will be installed for mining the deposits and operations begun immediately, he said.

House Approves Huge Naval Bill

WASHINGTON, June 16.—(AP)—An $8,550,000,000 ship construction measure—an unprecedented program designed to double the size of the United States fleet—was approved today by the house of representatives' naval committee.

The measure, demonstrating the navy's increasing emphasis on plane carriers and omitting any provision for new battleships, will provide for more than 1,400 ships of all types, including more than 400 combatant craft in the carrier-cruiser-destroyer category.

Chairman Carl Vinson said construction of the carriers would be started this year and the rest of the big-boat program next year. He said the keels for the carriers would be laid "immediately."

The bill authorizes construction of 500,000 tons of carriers, 500,000 tons of light and heavy cruisers and 900,000 tons of destroyers and destroyer escort vessels.

Wider Rationing Likely In States

CHICAGO, June 16.—(AP)—P. T. Hawkins of the office of price administration fuel rationing branch, Washington, said today extension of gasoline rationing outside the United States eastern seaboard in the near future is "a very definite possibility" but that it is hoped curtailed gasoline consumption will make fuel oil rationing unnecessary.

More than 90 per cent of the country's rubber stockpile, he said, consists of tires on automobiles now in use. With unrestricted travel, almost 25,000,000 automobiles — approximately 83 per cent of the total passenger transportation facilities—will have been retired from the highways by the end of 1944 because of tire exhaustion, he estimated.

"To date, gasoline rationing appears to be the most equitable and convenient means of controlling the use of automobiles."

Getting Around

First round in the Battle of Alaska seems to have the earmarks of another United Nations triumph. One cruiser sunk and seven other vessels damaged, is said to have been the price paid so far for a precarious Japanese foothold in the western Aleutians.

Despite the handicap of heavy fogs, U.S. army and navy bombers were able to inflict these damaging blows from the skies on what is now very clearly a full scale attempt by a powerful Japanese force to seize bases on the northwesterly fringe of North America.

Latest reports state American aircraft are still hammering away at the Jap invasion fleet and at the forces that have succeeded in landing on some of the islands.

The experts who have been repeatedly telling us that an attack in force against Alaska is "fantastic" will have to change their theme.

An aircraft carrier has been damaged by U.S. plane attacks and a transport vessel is also said to have been badly damaged by aerial attack. The size of the fleet is a clear indication that the operation was no mere diversion.

It also would appear that had it not been for the heavy fog that concealed movements of the Jap fleet from the eyes of vigilant airmen guarding the approaches to this continent, many more enemy surface craft would now be at the bottom of the Pacific, already cluttered with the wreckage of what was once the pride of the Japanese navy.

For a long time after Pearl Harbor, the big question was, "where is the U.S. fleet?"

But there's no mystery about the location of a big part of the Japanese fleet. It's right on the bottom of the Pacific ocean. And it takes a whole lot longer to build aircraft carriers and cruisers than it does to roll out the sleek, swift Martin B-26 medium bombers that have demered a few of Hirohito's battle wagons into Davey Jones' locker up Alaska way.

Speaking of the Martin B-26 recalls a conversation we had with the youthful pilot of one of these deadly battle cruisers of the skies.

"The B-26 is the hottest bomber in the sky today," the young pilot enthused.

"When she's really opened up it's a case of: 'There she is—she's gone'; few pursuit planes have a chance to catch us at 350 MPH," the airman declared.

There's also something quite appropriate in the fact the Japs landed on islands known as the Rat group, isn't there?

Labor Group Gives Employees Support

Support of the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council will be given packing plant employees in their campaign for increase in the basic wage rate paid these employees in Edmonton it was decided at the meeting of the trade body Monday night.

Request for support came from a delegate of the packing plant union, who stated that the present basic rate of 45 cents an hour was too low. It is not anticipated that immediate action will be taken to obtain this increase, but negotiations to bring about the increase will be planned and later put into effect.

Carl F. Berry, Trades Congress of Canada organizer, and Alfred Farmilo, president of the Alberta Federation of Labor, reported on organization meetings held by the packing plant and aircraft repair depot employees.

Four Groups Plan Raid Assistance

Chief Warden, Capt. A. J. Huff stated that the volunteers will be required to report Sunday at 2 p.m. at special posts delegated to them. Detail of their postings will be mailed to them on Friday or Saturday, when they will be given the name and address of the person to whom they will report.

Passenger Injured Auto-Tram Crash

One passenger was sent to hospital for treatment of cuts in the neck as the result of an unusual accident at 101 street and 100A avenue at 8:50 p.m. Monday.

Harry Hawryluk, 10547 97 street, was driving his car following a street car when he decided to look at the ammeter on the switchboard. At this moment the street car stopped and the car crashed into the rear of the tram.

The impact forced the front end of the car underneath the body of the street car, causing considerable damage to the body and steering gear.

Joseph Kukay, of 10548 97 street, suffered deep cuts in the side of his neck from flying glass and was admitted to the Royal Alexandra hospital. It was found that the injuries were not serious.

Boundary Between Land Causes Row

An argument that started over the location of a line separating the fields of two neighbors in northwest Edmonton came to a climax in city police court Tuesday when Police Magistrate A. J. Miller, K.C., fined Peter Belzo, 12418 135 street, $5 and costs on a charge of common assault.

The hearing revealed that Belzo assaulted Peter Myroniuk, an aged neighbor, by striking him with his fist, after accusing him of sowing grain beyond the imaginary line that separated their fields.

Belzo was also ordered to keep the peace for a period of six months on his own recognizance.

In the only other case that was conducted Tuesday forenoon Wiliam Murray was fined $20 and costs and given an option of 30 days in jail retroactive to the day of his arrest, on a charge of intoxication.

The case of Phillip Balla, who was charged with assault causing grievous bodily harm, was put off for one week awaiting the progress of recovery of his victim, Mike Lukinuk, who is confined to hospital with a serious skull injury.

Motorists Fined Traffic Breaches

A city motorist, Arthur G. Milner, who exceeded the 40-mile-an-hour speed limit on a highway leading to Edmonton, was fined $15 and costs when he appeared before Magistrate Harold Hawe, K.C., in city police court Monday afternoon.

Two rural motorists were fined for breaches of highway traffic regulations. Paul Kawulok, Athabaska truck driver, was fined $10 and costs for failing to obtain a trucking certificate and N. S. Perroit, Morinville, was fined $3 and costs for failing to have a mirror on his car when he had a trailer attached to the rear.

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

If the noon meal is called lunch and the evening meal dinner, where does supper come in?

THE ANSWERS

ALFRED W. JACOBSON, technician: The idea of lunch at noon is to obtain light meals and light snacks that workers, not able to go home for the mid-day meal, had to eat. Supper is the meal at home at noon, still in the daily routine. I am prepared to continue calling the noon meal my dinner and the evening meal my supper.

DONALD VERBOW, laborer: When I eat away from home consistently the taking of sandwiches and the like, I call that meal my lunch. If that noon meal is at home it's still my dinner.

WALTER GLASSMAN, farmer: On a farm the morning meal is breakfast, the noon meal dinner and the evening meal, supper. In the city there may be reason for calling the evening meal the dinner because so often that constitutes the day's heaviest meal.

JAMES MACUMBER, truckman: Practically no breakfast means a heavy noon meal, which can hardly be classed as a lunch. For me itz breakfast in the morning, dinner at noon, supper in the evening and lunch whenever I take an in-between snack.

MRS. J. CONNINGTON, housewife: A meal made by the process of cooking is classed as a dinner, but one made by the process of can opening is a lunch regardless of the time of day it comes.

Conciliator Holds Meet On Dispute

Inquest Opens Into Death Of Young City Boy

Inquest into the death of Robert "Bobby" Warner, 14-months-old son of Mr. and John Warner, 12048 92 street, was being held at city police court Tuesday afternoon, with Dr. E. A. Braithwaite, chief provincial coroner, in charge.

The coroner's jury consists of George Bagnall, John Hay, David Duncan, R. Talbot, F. LeGassick and William Munro, foreman.

The accident which caused death occurred at about 5 p.m., June 8, when the child is believed to have been struck and partly run over by a car believed to have been parked near the home of the child.

There were no eye-witnesses to the accident and no charges have been laid by city police, who believe that the accident occurred with the driver being completely unaware of the incident.

The wheel of the vehicle ran across the child's shoulder and over the side of his head, causing injuries that resulted in his death a few minutes after the child was found lying in the street by his older brother and a playmate.

Bottle Attack Causes Injury Base Of Skull

Victim of an attack from the rear by an irate neighbor wielding a milk bottle, Nick Lukinuk, of the Mariel block, 124 avenue and 66 street, was admitted to the Royal Alexandra hospital suffering from a severe injury to the base of his skull.

Lukinuk was found at the foot of the stairway at the block at 11:15 p.m. Monday bleeding profusely and in a state of unconsciousness.

City detectives investigated and found that Phillip Balla who resides at the rear of the block, admitted the assault. Balla told police that Lukinuk had been quarreling with Balla's son, and gave that as his reason for the assault.

Balla stated that he picked up a milk bottle and struck the victim from the rear. The base of the skull was injured.

Sergeant's Stripes

How did the sergeant get his stripes? No rank in the army has come in for so much comment as that of sergeant. Sergeants are pictured as hard-boiled, loud N.C.O.'s who bark and snap out orders. But they are usually pictured as intrepid, courageous and daring.

Sergeant's Stripes Have Long History

When the young private takes his first step up the military ladder he proudly displays a chevron or stripe. Since 1803 this device has been used to mark the non-commissioned officer, but its origin belongs to heraldry and a much more distant past.

In its ancient heraldic form, with point upward, the chevron represented the joined rafters of a roof. It was used as a badge of honor to signify the main supporters of the head of the clan, who was the "top of the house." It came to be employed in various forms as an emblem of rank for the knights and men-at-arms in feudal days and in the reign of George IV was included in army insignia.

The chevron has been used in many different ways in various armies and navies, but to denote non-commissioned rank in British armies it now is always worn with point down.

Don't Wed Until War Comes To End

Separation Is Dangerous For Married Boy and Girl; Scared Young Woman Is Advised to Delay Her Marriage Until Conflict Is Over

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I am a young girl in love with a boy with whom I have been keeping company for a year. I have been trying to persuade him to marry me before he goes into the army, but he refuses and says it will be best to wait until the war is over. I am scared that I will never get married if I wait that long. Do you think I should wait, or break up with him and look for someone else?

Dorothy Dix

Undecided.

Answer: I think the boy is exactly right about waiting until the war is over to marry, and I only hope he has enough backbone to refuse to let you rush him into a hysterical war wedding. He knows that in these uncertain times it is folly to take on new responsibilities, and that he is going to have plenty of cares and anxieties to worry over without adding the troubles of a family man to them.

He also realizes, as you do not, that absence puts a great strain upon the affections of young people, and that it is a dangerous thing for a boy-husband and a girl-wife to be parted. Both soon tire of being cut off from the pleasures and amusements of their time of life. They want to dance and go places and do things and chum around with other boys and girls. And if they do that, there is always the chance that they may forget the absent wife or husband and find someone whom they like better.

Hence the wise thing is for them to keep themselves free until the time comes when they can marry and lead a normal family life. Believe me, daughter, you would get mighty tired sitting up waiting for two or three years for your husband to come back, with no livelier amusement than reading an improving book, or looking for the letters that perhaps never will come.

LOOK BEFORE YOU LEAP

Apparently you want to marry this boy not because you are so much in love with him, but because you are afraid you will be an old maid. You want to marry just to be a-marrying, and that is about the silliest reason on earth for doing it.

Look about you and see how many of your girl friends who married are better off than you are with your job. Look at Sally whose husband knocked off work when he got married and makes her support him. Look at Janey whose husband drinks and beats her up when he is in his cups. Look at Mable who has aged ten years in the two she has been married and who looks so dragged out with the cooking and washing and ironing and baby-tending she has to do that she makes you want to cry over her.

A husband is God's best gift to a woman, but a bad husband is the worst curse the devil can send her. So don't marry any man who comes along just to be married. And don't marry any man until you find one you love enough to wait for until he is ready to marry.

HAVE TO BE BRUTAL

DEAR MISS DIX: My husband's brother recently married. He and his wife have a nice home of their own in another part of the state, but they are chronic visitors who descend on us, bag and baggage, without any invitation whenever they want an outing. They use our house as a free hotel. The wife sleeps until 11 o'clock in the morning. Her husband wants his breakfast at 9. If they miss getting in at our dinner hour, they raid the icebox.

We are people in very moderate circumstances, with a small house. I work at home. As an artist from eight to ten hours a day and do my own housework; so all of this extra work and responsibility is breaking me down. Now my new sister-in-law has informed me that she intends to spend her vacation with me and is going to bring her mother along. What in the world can I do? How can I tactfully brush them off without hurting my husband's feelings?

Answer: There is no tactful way of dealing with deadbeats. You have to be brutal with them because if they had any delicacy or feeling they would not impose themselves upon you. All that they are considering is beating a hotel bill by wishing themselves off on you.

If you haven't the nerve to tell them to their faces that you cannot afford to finance their outings, wait until they get home and then write them a letter in which you can tell them in unmistakable terms that you cannot afford the luxury of entertaining them and that, in addition to the expense they put you to, they interfere with your work and imperil your job, and that they will have to find another stopping place when they come to the city.

TOO MANY BEANS

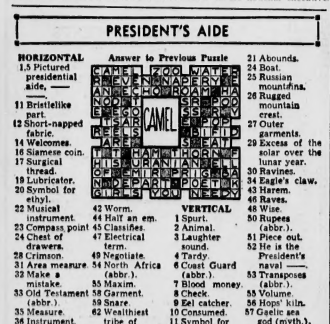

Lots of other people are also afflicted with grafting relatives, and a number of women have written me how they solved this problem. One woman said that she lived in the country and that every Sunday a horde of her and her husband's relatives not only drove out but brought their friends along, for a good dinner of fresh vegetables and country chicken. She stopped them by the simple expedient of serving corn, fat corn, with the same situation, stuck up signs all over the house, reading: "Dinner $2." And when her uninvited guests arrived she told them how nice it was that they were her first customers. That was that, and the last of them.

When we let ourselves be imposed upon, we have no one but ourselves to blame. If we had the backbone of a fishing worm, we wouldn't stand for it.

Points For Parents

By EDYTH THOMAS WALLACE

Father: "Here's pencil and paper, Jack. Go down the questions you want to ask Uncle Bill about camp. Then you can ask them when you are along with him, later on."

Father: "For pity's sake, quit interrupting, Jack. The rest of us are grown up and we want to listen in Bill without his being interrupted by a little boy."

The considerate parent will find a way to teach a child not to interrupt without making him feel he is an outsider in the group.

Minute Make-Ups

Eyes may be complemented with soft shadows of blue, green or violet. Match your eyeshadows to the accessory colors in your wardrobe. Or match eyeshadow to the color of your eyes. The blackest lashes take on added glamour when tipped with deep blue Egyptian mascara. Light pencilling of the eyebrows makes a frame for the eyes.

What To Do

What silver should accompany dishes that are passed at the table by a maid?

Answer—Where food is passed by a maid you should always have the dish that is being served accompanied by a serving spoon and a dinner fork.

Use the spoon, in your right hand, to cut your portion and to hold it—and the fork, held in your left hand, prongs down to assist holding the food while transferring it to your plate.

When food is passed the first time, whether you like it or not, you should take a small portion on your plate and say nothing. When it is passed a second time you may say "no, thank you" but never mention it if you don't care for what is being served.

Play Bang-Up Tennis—Expert Tells How

Footwork is important

Really learn to play a good game of tennis this year? You can, if you know the right way to clean up your weak points—that backhand, for instance!

Next time anyone plays to your backhand be able to smash back boldly! You don't have to be tricked out of position, running around the ball to hit it forehand.

Facing the left side line, with weight on left foot, hold head of racquet even with your waist and then swing it up and back as in top sketch. Turn your shoulders, pivot to gather power for your swing and bring your racquet round in an unbroken circular path.

Keep racquet facing net until it hits the ball hard, waist-high. Then turn face of racquet gradually toward ground.

If your backhand still lacks power, you may be bringing your hand through ahead of the racquet. This can't happen if you back swing with your whole arm and keep your wrist firm. Or is your trouble slow footwork, poor timing?

Whatever it is, our 32-page booklet by George Agnuter, famous tennis teacher, can help correct it. Gives diagrams, instructions to show how to hold the racquet, how to practise. Explains forehand, backhand, service, volley, footwork, lobbing.

Send 15 cents in coins for your copy of "Develop Correct Tennis Form" to The Edmonton Bulletin, Home Service Department, 60 Front St. West, Toronto, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of Booklet.

McCoy Health Service

Gentle eliminative measures are not of much value in eliminating rheumatic poisons. It is true that any measure which will expedite the throwing out of rheumatic poisons may bring about at least a temporary relief. Sweat baths will relieve some of the load of morbid material, and remedies which relax the pores will temporarily help, but it takes more than these remedies to effect a real cure.

If the rheumatism has reached the ocular stage, it will disappear very quickly on a fast of citrus fruit, that is oranges, lemons or grapefruit and plenty of water to drink. However, if the toxins have accumulated around the joints producing arthritis, the cure will be much slower and may take weeks or even months. A short fast will bring about some satisfactory results, as when the system is freed of some of the impurities, the soreness of the joints will become lessened. However, if there are any of the rheumatic poisons remaining in the body, the trouble is sure to show up again in some joint, and the trouble will keep on reappearing until the system is completely rid of the toxic material.

In the treatment of muscular rheumatism, hot applications can be used to free the congested circulation. One or two immersions daily in a tub of hot water, to which has been added a handful of Epsom salts, will aid in bringing about a more rapid recovery and usually the muscular soreness will disappear within a reasonable time after beginning the fast.

In arthritis, great benefit will be enjoyed at the beginning of the fast, but because of the bone changes which have taken place you must not expect any quick recovery. In this form of rheumatism it is always a good plan for the patient to remain quietly in bed and apply hot packs to the joints after rubbing the skin with oil of wintergreen which will assist in producing copious perspiration. The circulation will be helped if a hot water bottle or electric pad is placed at the foot of the bed. The joints should not be moved any more than necessary, as any irritation will only delay the progress of the cure.

If one fast does not bring about a complete cure, it may be necessary to live on a restricted diet for a short time and then return to the fast again. Following or between the fasts, it is a good plan to take large quantities of the non-starchy vegetables, both cooked and uncooked and in fact it is often advisable to stuff on these vegetables to provide plenty of safe bulk for the bowels.

The principal point that I want to bring out in this article is that a permanent cure depends entirely upon the proper functioning of a clean, healthy colon. The colon must be in a good position so that there are no pockets or kinks to hold accumulations of poisonous fecal matter. The least return of rheumatic pain will show that the elimination has been retarded. When this happens, it means that more enemas and another fast should be used. For a time, it is well to eliminate all sugars and starches. Do not be anxious to take up exercise too quickly after the cure seems to have been achieved, as this would only irritate the inflamed regions and might encourage the return of your former trouble.

All questions regarding Health and Diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self-addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 100 words. Address McSt., Los Angeles, Calif.

Your Baby And Mine

The process of digestion is an intricate one, but in its simplest terms it consists of the food in the mouth being attacked by the digestive action of the saliva. When it reaches the stomach the disintegrative process is continued by the action of the strong digestive acids. A combination of these two reduce the stomach contents to a fluid and this is forced into the small intestine by the rhythmical contractions of the stomach.

When there is any abnormal contraction or obstruction in the gateway between the stomach and small intestine, this natural process is halted. The stomach contracts, but contents of the stomach whirl about but only a minute portion of fluid leaves the stomach. Gas is given off, the stomach tries harder and harder, and eventually, sooner or later, the contents of the stomach are vomited forth with great force. As mothers always describe it, "it comes with a gush."

A reader wants to know the reason her four-months-old son always throws up even three or four hours after a feeding, if she so much as picks him up?

The probable reason is the above. But, of course, this must be checked by the attending doctor. But, normally, in three or four hours most of the stomach contents should have been passed on to the duodenum and there would be little or nothing to vomit. That there is would indicate that something is prolonging the normal course of digestion and a thickened or obstructed pylorus might be that "something."

You did not tell me the baby's birth or present weight, and those figures would help in answering. If the baby has a proper formula but is gaining very slowly and is chronically constipated, then much nutrition is being lost through the vomiting.

If the baby is gaining normally, it is possible that you are failing to burp the baby two or three times during a feeding, and gas and gas promote vomiting. Or some ingredient of the formula may not be digested easily and so vomiting takes place hours after a feeding.

I hope some of these hints will give you a clew to what is wrong. Our leaflet, "Burping Baby Alarmed, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred, in care of this newspaper.

St. Stephen's College chapel was bright with early summer flowers, Monday evening, in setting for the wedding ceremony at which Lola L. Nickerson, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Nickerson of Edmonton, became the bride of Dr. John E. Bradley, only son of Mr. and Mrs W. Bradley of Calgary. The Rev. D. C. Ramsey officiated.

Canada Y.W.C.A. To Raise Gift Of $50,000 For British Branch

LAST year, the British Y.W.C.A. asked the Y.W.C.A. units across Canada for aid in their program of war assistance work, and the concerted support of members and friends in the Dominion made the realization of the pledge of $50,000 possible. This year, facing even a greater task than before, the British organization is again seeking aid, and a new pledge of $50,000 has been given them.

Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of Rt. Hon. Prime Minister Churchill is sponsor of the fund. Mrs. Arthur Grenfell, president of the British Y.W.C.A., who visited in Edmonton this spring, is assisting her.

OPENS LEAVE CLUB

Recently in London, Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth opened a Y.W.C.A. Leave and Transit Club for Service Women at Ashley House, to be managed by the British Y.W.C.A.

In declaring the Club open, Her Majesty said: "It is a great pleasure for me to come today to open this Club for Service women who may be on transit or on short leave in London. As the number of women in the forces grows, so does the need for club and hostel accommodation, and I think the Army authorities should be congratulated—first, on their promptitude in acquiring premises so conveniently situated for travellers, and secondly, for their wisdom in placing this Services Club under the management of the Y.W.C.A.

"The name of the association stood high before the outbreak of war, but I think it never stood higher than it does today, for its services touch all sides of our national life, whether it be the needs of our uniformed women in a club of this kind or in the no less vital needs of our young people.

"As Patron of this association, I am glad to pay this tribute to its work, and to those who are serving it in whatever capacity.

"I have much pleasure in declaring this club open and may the women who are serving their country so admirably find here the rest, refreshment, and happy atmosphere they so well deserve."

Not only is the Y.W.C.A. in Britain concerned with work for servicewomen, but for servicemen also. sailors, soldiers and airmen have been entertained at various centres, and delightful concerts and entertainments have helped to keep up their courage and spread a note of cheer.

The Edmonton Club Y.W.C.A. is joining with its sister branches across Canada in support of the pledge for the British Y.W.C.A.

Social Workers Will Be Needed If Air Raids Come To Canada

By MARGARET ECKER

OTTAWA, June 16.—(CP)—Dr. George Davidson brings a fresh approach to the problem of air raid precautions. Against the day the first bombs fell in Canada, the newly-appointed director of the Canadian Welfare Council is mentally mobilizing welfare facilities to meet any crisis in Canadian homes or Canadian society.

"If Canada has an air raid, east or west, the chief problem won't be burying the dead," Dr. Davidson said in an interview. "It will be giving shelter to the people whose homes have been smashed, reconstructing their whole life anew.

"Britain discovered that when a bomb drops on a building, the building is smashed, but, remarkably, the people aren't all killed, and many aren't even hurt. But they are homeless. Their family life has been disrupted. That's where social workers come in."

A bombed-out area, in Dr. Davidson's eyes, doesn't need so many hospital beds half as much as it needs welfare machinery to fit victims of the raid back into society, provide them with homes that could be more or less permanent, with food, clothes and employment if necessary.

BLITZ WORKS FAST

Canada's defence plans, eventually, must include well-trained social workers," said the youthful sociologist from Vancouver. "A blitz destroys society the same way the depression did—only a blitz is faster." Public welfare departments, he contends, should be an integral part of precautions. Hundreds more workers will be needed but existing social agencies can be used as a basis.

Provision will have to be made for bombed-out families, Dr. Davidson said, and the ideal set-up is to assure rehabilitation of the family as a group—permanently.

Miss E. Berry, Mr. Fishburne Are Married

CHARMING informality was the keynote of the wedding ceremony performed in Holy Trinity church on Friday when Edna Marie, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Berry of Vancouver, formerly of Edmonton, spoke marriage vows with Lawrence Arthur Fishburne, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Fishburne of this city. The Rev. W. M. Nainby officiated.

The bride is well known in Girl Guide circles in this city, having played an active role in the organization for many years. She was formerly lieutenant of the 5th and captain of the 11th companies on the south side.

Dr. G. B. Sanford gave the bride in marriage. The bride chose a simply styled afternoon frock of soft rose crepe, with which she wore a picture hat, beige accessories and shoulder corsage of talisman roses.

Mrs. S. Wright was her sister's only attendant. She was frocked in horizon blue sheer, crisp white accessories and a corsage of roses. LAC. Cyril Fishburne was his brother's best man. Mr. Herbert Wild supplied wedding music.

Following the ceremony, a reception to relatives and immediate friends was held. Mrs. Berry received wearing a brown floral sheer with tan accessories and a corsage of carnations. Mrs. Fishburne chose a navy jacket ensemble, white accessories and carnations.

BRIDE'S TABLE

The bride's table was graced with a bridal bell, streamers and sweetheart roses. It was centred with a tiered wedding cake topped with sweetheart roses. The Rev. W. M. Nainby proposed a toast to the bride.

After a honeymoon to Banff and Lake Louise, the couple will take up residence in Edmonton.

Stoker P. O. William Forbes of Halifax was an out-of-town guest at the ceremony.

Creche Society Cares For 643 Children

REPORTING the highest attendance at the Edmonton Creche day nursery since its opening in September, 1930, Mrs. G. H. Monkman stated at a recent board meeting that 643 children had been cared for during the month of May. The meeting was held in the Macdonald hotel Monday afternoon and Mrs. W. D. Spence, president, was in the chair.

In her report she stated, too, that 1,025 meals and 433 bottle feedings had been given during the month.

Assembly-Line System Adopted In New Call-Up

By FRANK FLAHERTY

OTTAWA, June 16. — (CP) — Assembly-line methods are to be applied to the making of soldiers out of civilians under the compulsory military training system.

Military district headquarters and depot staffs across Canada are busy this week making arrangements for introduction with the July call-up of the new system of inducting compulsory service recruits into the army.

NEW SYSTEM

Roughly, the new arrangement calls for men to report on different days to depots instead of reporting all on one day to training centres. The innovation in the method of handling men after their call-up goes into effect just one month ahead of a change in the method of selecting those to be called up. For the August call-up the lottery principle will be used for the first time, in place of the selective principle employed up to now.

The army has requisitioned 15,000 men for July, of whom 12,250 are to be new men and 2,750 from the group who received 30 days' compulsory training earlier in the war and later returned to civilian life with the status of reserve army soldiers.

The men will report in small groups at district depots on different days over a three-week period. They will be checking in every day in the week except Saturdays and Sundays from July 16 to Aug. 7.

At the depots they will be given their medical examination, and be documented and outfitted with clothing and other essentials. Then they will be posted to training centres as ordered, all ready to start on the training syllabus.

ENROLMENT EXPERTS

With the work of examination, documentation and outfitting agreed over a three-week period at the depots it can be done by a small staff who will become more or less enrolment specialists.

When the monthly quotas of compulsory service men reported to training centres in large groups the work was done in a few days with the help of most of the staff of the training centres.

That meant training was interrupted during the period required to get the men settled in the army. On the arrival of a new class there was always an interval of several days during which instructors and staff who would otherwise have been engaged in training were busy on this work.

Now the instructors and the staffs will go right ahead. As one begins' class of recruits at a training centre moves up to the next grade a new class will move in and start its training.

TRAIN MORE MEN

By this system of using training staff and facilities for training only, the army can train more men. Thus it is expected it will be possible to handle the 15,000 men being called up for July without increasing the establishment. The training centres will be filled at all times with men who are actually training and not waiting their turn for the issue of uniforms and pay books.

Off To Sea: New Corvettes Shown Their Stuff

Plowing through calm off-shore waters of the Atlantic coast, a squadron of corvettes, fresh from Dominion shipyards and with their rivets hardly cooled, heads for the high seas to be put through their paces before being declared ready for service. Scores of these vest-pocket warships named after Canadian cities and towns, are fighting in the grim battle of the Atlantic to maintain the life lines of the United Nations.

Many Evacuated As Town Flooded

SHERBROOKE, Que., June 16.—(CP)—About 50 Thetford mines families were evacuated from their homes yesterday when the Becancourt river overflowed its banks into the streets of that asbestos mining town, as flood waters swirled through sections of the eastern townships after torrential rains.

The Thetford families were rescued by row boats and trucks and taken to homes far from the banks of the river.

Earlier reports from all parts of the eastern townships flat lands brought a picture of raging torrents and disintegrating bridges, as a result of a record downpour of 4.22 inches of rain.

The town of Sawyerville was the most severely hit, being completely cut off from Cookshire and Sherbrooke with the collapse of a steel bridge about a mile outside of town.

At Sherbrooke, several feet of water covered streets and filled cellars along the banks of the St. Francis. Damages have been tentatively estimated at tens of thousands of dollars.

Service on Canadian Pacific, Canadian National and Quebec Central railways was suspended with all inter-urban bus routes blocked.

Time Now To Start Post-War Program Orange Head Urges

TORONTO, June 16.—(CP)—Grand Master James Black of the Grand Orange Lodge of British America told delegates to the lodge's 67th annual session here yesterday "the time has come when the Dominion government should take the earliest opportunity of starting its post-war program."

He said: "The citizens of the Dominion are anxious to know what happens when the war is over. They want to know that there will be no repetition of the last depression period."

He said the Orange order had already contributed a substantial amount to the war effort. The objective of $10,000 set at the Vancouver meeting two years ago had been subscribed three times over and the money used to purchase four mobile kitchens and relieve the suffering of bombing victims.

Save 30 Ships

LONDON, June 16.—(CP)—The saving of half an ounce of bread, normally wasted by everybody every day, will "save a whole convoy of 30 ships a year," Philipp Noel Baker, Labor member of parliament and spokesman for the Food Ministry, told women attending a saving exhibition yesterday.

WARNING GIVEN

Hungary, Rumania In New Flare-Up

BERNE, Switzerland, June 16.—(AP)—The old enmity between Hungary and Rumania flared up again yesterday when the Hungarian premier, Nicholas Kallay, replied to new anti-Hungarian measures in Rumania with a warning Hungary would defend her present frontiers "to the death".

Kallay spoke near the Rumanian frontier in Hungarian Transylvania at the same time the Hungarian press published reports the Rumanians are forcing the Hungarian minority to leave the Rumanian Transylvania by confiscating their foodstuffs and refusing to give them ration cards.

These reports said Rumanian soldiers, descending in force, broke into homes and took even the current day's food supply from the Hungarians who were given exit visas to cross to their homeland on foot.

This was the first use of force reported in the intermittent dispute between the two Axis satellites over the question of Transylvania and the Vienna award which gave the northern part of this territory to Hungary in 1940.

Kallay told Transylvanian villages that Hungary considered watching over them as "the first duty" of the nation and the army.

He referred to the belief of "another powderkeg" that it could establish itself there and declared the territory of Hungarian Transylvania will be defended, if need be, to the death."

Limit Placed On Elastic Webbing For Suspenders

OTTAWA, June 16.—(CP)—The Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced last night an order limiting quantity of elastic webbing or elastic cord which may be used in suspenders and prescribing restrictions in packaging, labelling and decorations of shirts, pyjamas and neckwear.

Under the order, elastic suspenders containing more than 18 inches of elastic webbing may no longer be produced. No manufacturer may sell or deliver such suspenders to any retailer, wholesaler or jobber after June 30, with the provision that enough may be supplied to fill orders accepted by mail order companies from advertisements in spring and summer catalogues.

New Air Letter Service To Men Overseas Opens

OTTAWA, June 16—(CP)—New air letter forms for communication with the Canadian fighting forces overseas were made available at post offices throughout the dominion yesterday and officials indicated there was a quick response.

For a 10-cent rate the form, a combined letter sheet and envelope, is sent by air mail to members of the fighting services.

Postal officials repeated their warning that no enclosures may be made in the form which must be used to take advantage of the low rate. If any enclosures are made the letter will be sent by ordinary mail. They said a number of the form letters handed in so far had contained enclosures.

Axis Executes Hundreds Greeks

LONDON, June 16.—(CP)—The Greek government in London declared today hundreds of Greeks recently have been executed by Germans, Bulgarian and Italian occupation forces in an attempt to curb persistent sabotage and attacks on foreign soldiers.

It reported an Athens newspaper announcement of a "large number" shot the day after German June 4 communique said 300 hostages had been taken. Five persons, it added, were shot late in May for attacks on Italian soldiers and four others for attempts to flee abroad.

Greek authorities in Turkey were said to have received reports that Bulgarian troops recently had killed 130 Greeks in the Kilkis district.

POWDERED IN DOMINION FACTORY

Million Eggs Per Day Sent From Canada To Britain

At a doughnut plant in Trenton, Ont., Canada is getting one million eggs ready every day to ship to Britain—in powder form. The eggs come out of storage, are carefully selected by 100 women experts who each handle 10,000 a day, and then processed into powder. In ordinary barrels they are shipped to Britain. Here are girls at the big plant getting the eggs ready for processing. After the eggs arrive they are broken by Gloria Dunford; sniffed for goodness; poured out as a mixture; Ileen Cook packs the eggs powder, 140 pounds to the barrel.

Canadian Soldiers Train On English Downs To Meet The Enemy

Australian troops were on night landing force manoeuvres in New South Wales. "Mines" of the explosive gelignite were strewn to provide realism. One of them exploded prematurely just as a boatload of soldiers passed over it. The men were blasted high into the air, the boat destroyed. A nearby photographer had presence of mind to snap the sensational photo above. It shows the soldiers falling back to earth from the centre of the 80-foot high waterspout created by the explosion. The miracle: men were uninjured, except for shock.

"Tombstone"—For Some Japs

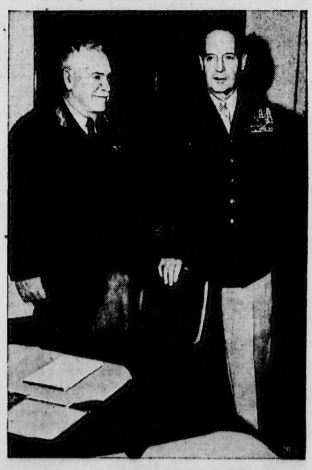

The wreck of one of four Japanese submarines sunk in Sydney harbor, Australia, during an attempted surprise attack against shipping, is shown above as it was raised for examination by navy experts. The sub, one end of which is emerging from the water, is larger than the two-man submarines destroyed in the Dec. 7 attack on Pearl Harbor.

It's A Uniform

You might never guess it, but this is a uniform, according to R.C.A.F. standards. It's the sports uniform of the women's division and is light, practical and attractive, as this young airwoman shows. It is of soft grey-blue shade, the shorts of cotton twill, the pullover of knitted cotton.

Shape Australia's Destiny

New picture from Australia shows together for first time the men who command forces fighting in the land down under: Gen. Thomas Blamey, left, Australian commander, and Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander-in-chief of United Nations forces in the southwest Pacific.

Two Of Three Are Canadian D.F.C.'s

Two of these three Spitfire pilots, all British Commonwealth Air Training Plan graduates, and all pals in an R.C.A.F. Spitfire squadron, have been awarded Distinguished Flying Crosses. They are Flight Lieutenant Ian Ormston (left) of Montreal, and Flight Lieutenant Eugene "Jeep" Neal of Quebec city (middle). The third man, Pilot Officer Don Blakeslee of Fairport Harbor, O., is well on his way to matching the record of Neal and Ormston who, between them, have officially destroyed four Nazi aircraft. The three recently fought their way out of a hornet's nest of Nazi fighters in greatly superior numbers during a daylight sweep over France. Ormston shot down one. Neal was shot down himself and bailed out into the English channel. Blakeslee scored two "probables."

Caribbean Crisis

CHAPTER XVI

"YOU are William Talcott?"

"Yes."

"You are the manager at Abas Island?"

"I was. I have been relieved and am on my way back to New York."

"But you were in charge when the launch left the Island?"

"Yes."

"How long was Sebastien in your employ?"

"Five years. He came to us from San Juan to operate the distillation apparatus. I made him foreman three years ago."

"Did he have any enemies that you know about?"

"No."

"Can you tell us where he got that slug wound in his arm?"

"Yes. The night before last a smuggler named Jackson attempted to land on Abas and we attempted to stop him."

"Jackson!" The chief of police became apoplectic. "Is he mixed up in this?"

"I don't know."

The chief appraised the group with a sour eye. "Which of you is Miss Peterson?"

She stepped forward. Smartly attired, she was, in a suit of gabardine, a flaring blue bonnet confining her ash blond hair. Cool and self-possessed, with not the slightest tremor betraying her emotion.

"You were one of the guests on Abas Island and a passenger on the launch. You arrived at two o'clock this morning. After clearing customs, where did you go?"

"Miss Swenson and I went to the home of my friends near Estate Cantante."

"Were you a witness to the attempted landing of the self-styled 'Captain Jackson' on Abas Island?"

"Yes."

"Would you say that the results were successful?"

"No. After one of the crew struck Mr. MacDowell, Mr. Halsey grabbed a pistol and forced them to return to the schooner."

The chief scowled. "Mr. Halsey, I understand you and Professor Constantine spent the remainder of the night at the Grand. Did you go there directly after clearing customs?"

"Yes."

"Did you at any time during the night or this morning see any of Jackson's crew in Charlotte Amalie?"

"I can't say that I did. Things happened rather fast down there, you know. I doubt if I would recognize anyone outside of Jackson himself."

"Would you say that Jackson had sufficient desire to get even by knifing this man?"

"It would be possible, yes."

The chief quelled an uprising in his liver. "We have every reason to believe that Jackson was here last night. He left his calling card, a dozen natives smuggled in from Tortola. It is just possible also that he despatched a man to take care of the unfinished business of Abas Island. As I understand it, you are all passengers on the Blue Petrel. I see nothing to prevent your departure."

So it was over. Jackson's name had done it. Guilty or not, his reputation was enough. If they ever catch him, Talcott thought grimly, they'll hang him to the Post Office flagpole before they start their investigation.

But it couldn't have been Jackson or any of his men who had murdered Sebastien. If it was revenge they wanted, they would have taken it on him or Halsey. And after unloading his freight Jackson wasn't one to stick around. No. Of one thing only was Bill Talcott positive: the murder was directly connected with his frame-up and the intrigue on Abas Island.

June Paterson came to him as they were leaving. Her hand rested on his arm, and softly she said, "I'm sorry, Bill. You were very fond of him, weren't you?"

He didn't answer. His eyes, hard and fathomless, were on Halsey. For he, despite his worldliness, was acting most strangely. Pulling away to walk by himself. Jumping at shadows. Scared, that was it. Did he know more than he wanted to, or was he beginning to have misgivings about his auditor friend Struthers? Whatever it was, the man was frightened to death.

Talcott checked out at Hotel 1839, refused one of the proprietor's famed planter's punches, and with MacDowell rode to West India wharf. MacDowell had changed; wasn't cocksure any more. He kept his thoughts silent behind a puzzled face, and once on board the Blue Petrel, disappeared in the throng of basket-laden passengers.

Talcott sought a lonely spot forward, his mind filled with fat, faithful Sebastien. The man had feared violence and death, had offended no one. Yet a covert knife-thrust had finished him while in sleep under the stars he loved. Why had he been killed?

He recalled the words of the quiet, gray-eyed man. Sinister, suggesting a web reaching out across the blockaded European Continent to envelop Abas in its toils. Intrigue for the control of a tiny, smelly speck in Anegada Passage. Not for nitrates alone. Something bigger. Some enterprise that could be carried on under the guise of a legitimate American business. Right under the guns of the destroyers at Saint Thomas. Right under the nose of Old Man Winters.

Why had Sebastien been killed? Were the plotters prepared to remove everyone of authority so that their work could be carried on unhindered? It didn't make sense. Surely Struthers must know that as soon as Bill Talcott reached New York all hell would break loose. The frameup would dissolve in thin air. But was it so simple as that? Had Struthers purposely played up the obvious so that his true machinations would go undetected until too late?

Halsey had the auditor's report. Perhaps in that report Talcott would find that he was fighting. Those carefully worded pages must contain more than a charge of shortage or a payroll padding. For now sudden violent death was in the cards; murder had become a part of the hand.

Talcott's eyes turned from the long concrete wharf. In five days he would be in New York. What awaited him there he could not fathom. He'd been sure of himself when Struthers, he thought, was playing a lone dangerous game. Now—

"Have you seen Halsey?"

"Eh?" He turned, startled, to confront Professor Constantine. So deep in thought had he been he hadn't heard the odd little man's approach. "Oh, Halsey? Can't say that I have."

The Professor clutched tighter to a voluminous book and transferred a bottle of pills to his left hand. He thought he was right behind me. He complained of a headache so I secured this aspirin— Likeable chap, isn't he? Pure Nordic. Very reliable— I do hope he doesn't miss the boat."

to the Air Marshal Bishop fund for the Cadet League of Canada.

Dennis King, handsome and heroic baritone of slate and screen, has sacrificed a well earned rest in order to take part in the celebrity parade.

A GREAT STAR

Dennis King agreed to appear because (a) he was born in Coventry; (b) his son left Upper Canada College in Toronto to join the Royal Canadian Air Force; (c) the entire proceeds of the strenuous three-weeks' trans-Canada tour will be turned over to the Air Cadet League of Canada; (d) Dennis King himself went through the last war from 1914 on; and (e) the director of "Celebrity Parade" is his long-time friend, Herbert Wilcox, who served in the same squadron with the then Billy Bishop.

Dennis King will appear with a distinguished cast of stage and screen stars in Noel Coward's "Still Life" and later will play the Duke of Wellington to Miss Neagle's Queen Victoria. His career has been spectacular. The Coventry lad always had a yearning for the stage. At 19, he made his first stage appearance with the Birmingham Repertory Theatre in Shakespeare's "As You Like It". He made his London debut a year later in "Monsieur Beaucaire" and was enthusiastically hailed by the critics and London theatre-goers.

NEW YORK SUCCESS

He was induced to come to New York and scored an outstanding success in "Clair de Lune," but this was more than superseded when he sang and played the role of Francois Villon in "The Vagabond King." This ran for two years on Broadway and Dennis King later did the film-role in Hollywood. He then played the rousing role of D'Artagnan in the musical version of the Dumas action-adventure story, "The Three Musketeers." After its long Broadway run, he took the play to London to duplicate his New York success.

Other outstanding roles have been his Mercutio in "Romeo and Juliet," and his Richard II in "Richard of Bordeaux". In the comedy-drama field, he scored an outstanding success in "Petticoat Fever" and then topped this as the star of "I Married an Angel." His last appearance prior to his participation in "Celebrity Parade," was the successful Chicago run of Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirit."

TORONTO, June 16.—(CP)—Anna Neagle, a beautiful girl who started out as a dream child in Alice Blue Gown and ended the night as the aged Queen Victoria, brought vibrant life last night to Air Marshal William A. Bishop's fund in aid of the Air Cadet League of Canada.

Superlative was added to superlative in the initial showing of "Celebrity Parade" in the Victoria Theatre here, because the procession of stars was augmented by Air Marshal Bishop's announcement that an all-time record—for benefit performance—had been established by the show.

$97,000 TAKEN IN

A total of $97,000 was taken in and Canada's most distinguished ace of the First Great War said the figure would be well over $100,000 when final figures were received.

The only comparative figure on benefit performances was the result of a benefit show by the British War Relief in New York City when $41,000 was taken in, said Air Marshal Bishop. That was tops until Toronto came through with two-and-a-half times as much to launch the league fund.

Air Marshal Bishop might have stolen the show but for Miss Neagle herself. She first came out in a blue gown for the dance, and at the end appeared as Queen Victoria, giving the audience a glimpse of the scenes whose performances have brought international recognition. Notable among the other stars was Boris Thimar, dancing Cole Porter's "Begin the Beguine."

Seat prices for the show ranged from $1 general admission to $10 for box seats, but the admission prices were only a fraction of the receipts for the performance, the only one in Toronto before the show goes on the road. There were contributions of as much as $3,000 apiece from industrial firms, organizations and prominent citizens.

GALAXY OF STARS

In addition to Miss Neagle and Tibmar the cast included Lady Cedric Hardwicke, Dennis Hoey, baritone, Colin Keith-Johnston, former R.A.F. flier and later star of the London and New York stage, Moyna Macgill, Belfast girl who co-starred with Sir Gerald Du Maurier, Richard Gaines, who followed Raymond Massey in the title role of "Abe Lincoln of Illinois," and Alfreda Wallace of Montreal and F/O. Robert Coote of the R.C.A.F., son of Bert Coote, famous English comedian, and himself an actor of considerable experience.

Nazi Fears Grow Over Possibility Allied Invasion

LONDON, June 16.—(CP)—The Free French press service declared today Germany is so "nervous over the possibility of an Allied offensive in the west" that the guns of the Maginot Line have been reversed and new fortifications are being built along the Rhine. The statement declared the German high command has ordered special anti-commando units, equipped for hand-to-hand and street fighting, to be stationed at major points along the coast.

3 City Religious Groups Plan Roles Post-War Reconstruction

Representatives of three religious groups, the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish, spoke on what their church has to offer to post-war reconstruction, at a public meeting sponsored by the Edmonton Consumers' League at the public library Tuesday afternoon.

The Rev. J. MacBeath Miller, M.A., B.D., represented the Presbyterian church, Dr. E. Wershof, president of the Edmonton Zionist Council, spoke on behalf of the Jews and Miss Marion Conroy represented the Catholic church in place of Most Rev. J. H. MacDonald, Archbishop of Edmonton, who was unable to attend owing to illness.

PROGRESS OUTLINED

Mrs. Conroy outlined the progress of co-operatives and especially credit unions across Canada and the United States. She spoke of the beginning of the movement at Antigonish, N.S., where the Archbishop of Edmonton, was actively engaged in setting up the union.

She stated that the work of a credit union is closely linked with the work that the consumers of Edmonton are doing through their Consumers' League.

The Catholic church has always tried to put forth programs designed for the betterment of the downtrodden, Mrs. Conroy stated.

Dr. Wershof stated that the contribution the Jewish church has to offer is reflected in results derived from the advent of Jews into free countries. He spoke of the sudden downfall of civilization and liberalism in countries soon after the Jews were driven out and the proportional rise of culture after they were admitted.

This was true of England in the middle ages, Spain later and now of Germany, Dr. Wershof declared.

REASON FOR TREND

The reason for this trend is because the Jews contributed in a great measure to the culture and wealth of the country, he explained.

After the war, he hopes to see brought into play, throughout the world the cultures which originated with the Jews some 3,000 years ago. This can be done through the re-establishment of Palestine as a home for Jewish refugees where agriculture would be stressed as a means of livelihood, Dr. Wershof stated.

Rev. Mr. Miller listed God, scripture, the church, prayer, love, faith, truth and hope as things to offer for the future; as it has been offered in the past.

At the present time the church is offering leadership and a world-wide fellowship through Christian Mission enterprise, he added.

The services of countless faithful men and women who serve as the cements of society and the salt of the earth cannot be overlooked.

IMPORTANT STEPS

He regarded the movement on the part of Christian churches to unite and the advancement of definite economic proposals by churches as two important steps toward a betterment of post-war livelihood.

The church's business is inspiration and an attempt to see life as a whole, Rev. Miller stated in conclusion.

David Duncan, president of the Edmonton Consumers' League, was chairman of the meeting and Charles E. Nix was secretary.

During the business portion of the meeting it was decided not to hold meetings during July and August.

Two Break Jail At Okalla Farm

VANCOUVER, June 16.—(CP)—British Columbia police reported last night that two more Mike Oleski, 24, and Lloyd Clark, 19, had escaped from Oakalla prison farm, in adjoining Burnaby municipality. It was the second prison break here in a little more than two weeks.

Warden Walter Owen could not be reached immediately for details of the latest escape. Police said a posse of prison guards and police officers was scouring the bushes surrounding the prison in search of Glowski and Clark.

Four other men, Earl William Waddell, Frank Little, Albert Mustfelt and Charles Lavallee escaped from Oakalla on May 29 after knocking out two prison guards. Little and Waddell were recaptured the same night but the other two still are at liberty.

Canadian Army Officers Must Serve In Ranks

The young recruit of today's army has not only a chance to learn a valuable trade for the day when he returns to civil life, he has every opportunity of finishing the war with high rank. It is now a regulation of the Canadian active forces that a candidate for a commission must first serve in the ranks.

With Army Week scheduled to open here with a grand parade and display of units of Edmonton Garrison, on Sunday, June 28, attention will be directed to the army. The following day, June 29, the celebrations will commence in earnest and will continue throughout the week.

Edmontonians will co-operate to the full in making the week a success and special attention will be paid to the Army, its methods and operation.

This is not altogether new; it is merely continuing a 1914-18 innovation which proved itself invaluable under the stress and attrition of action.

Promotion from the ranks was a radical departure from army custom adopted as an emergency measure in 1915. But it proved so sound it was continued when the acute shortage of subalterns was relieved. After the second Battle of Ypres it was apparent that the attrition was to be most serious in the ranks of the junior commanders. Inadequate reserves for reinforcement in England were quickly exhausted.

COMMISSIONED IN FIELD

The result was that many commissions were granted in the field, the unit commanders' recommendation being accepted as sufficient qualification. To be non-commissioned today and commissioned tomorrow was an experience of soldiers in every 1st Division battalion in 1915.

The plan worked, even without special training, for two reasons. One was that the Canadians had a high percentage of men in the ranks with the requisite educational background. The second reason was that the prolonged deadlock made first-hand knowledge of trench warfare one of the most valuable assets a new officer could possess. Later in the war, scores of Canadian non-commissioned officers and men were commissioned to the British army, whose provision for new officers was also inadequate.

PROVES SELF

The proof of the system became clearly evident during the long series of offensive operations in which the Canadian Corps was prominent between August 1918 and the armistice.

BECAME GOOD OFFICERS

The drain was heavy and continuous, especially amongst the all-important junior leaders. It never outpaced the supply of new officers with experience under service conditions. In addition, there were several officers who had begun their long period of active service in the ranks who had now become commanders or second-in-command of battalions. Even for the skeptics it was convincing proof of the high calibre of officer material to be found in the ranks.

PAYS DIVIDENDS

The system is paying dividends, in this war. Several of the present Canadian Army divisional commanders are products of it. Major-General G. R. Pearkes, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., who commands the 1st Canadian Division, left Canada in 1915 as a lance-corporal with the 2nd Canadian Mounted Rifles. Maj.-General C. B. Price, D.S.O., M.C., commander of the 3rd Division, went overseas in 1914 as a company sergeant-major with the 14th Battalion. Major-General Potts, of the 6th Division was a private in the P.P.C.L.I.; Major-General Leclerc was a sapper in the Royal Canadian Engineers. Major-General Worthington, 4th Armoured Division, went to France as a private in the Canadian Black Watch.

Japs Closing In On Vital Railroad

By ROBERT P. MARTIN

CHUNGKING, June 16.—(BUP)—More than 150,000 Japanese troops tightened a huge pincers upon the vital Chekiang-Kiangsi railroad of eastern China today in a drive believed to be aimed at countering any Allied naval offensive along the Japanese sea route between Shanghai and Singapore.

A Chinese communique tonight said Japanese were hitting distractedly to an 80-mile middle section of the railroad between Yingtan and Kinhwa, and there was intimated that Shangjao may have fallen to a Japanese column of 100,000 men driving into Kiangsi province from Chekiang province.

It was acknowledged that the enemy had battered his way into Shangjao's outskirts and that the situation there was "obscure." Reporting said that the Chinese have scant hopes of being able to hold any of the 400-mile railway.

Neutral military observers said the immediate Japanese goals in east China—as a result of the resounding United States naval victories in the Pacific—appeared to be a complete conquest of the railroad and the equally important Kiangsi-Kwangtung railway to provide an unbroken route of overland transportation from Shanghai to Canton.

Sea Captain Dies

LONDON, June 16.—(CP)—The death of Capt. Arthur Tillotson Brown, skipper of the old Cunard Liner Mauretania, and later of the new Mauretania when she made her maiden trans-Atlantic crossing in 1939, was announced last night. He died at sea.

Banking Discussed At Kinsmen's Meet

Regular fortnightly meeting of the Edmonton Kinsmen Club featured a vocational talk by Carl Venn on the development of banking. Mr. Venn, a member of the club, is an accountant with the Bank of Toronto.

The brief talk was delivered following a dinner. A report on the final returns of the Kinsmen auction that was held at the Market Square on June 3 was given by committee chairmen. It revealed that approximately 45,000 quarts of milk will be sent to Britain by funds raised from the mammoth sale.

Martin Graham was introduced to the club as a new member. Roger W. Roscoe, Kinsmen president, was in the chair.

Medical Officers Coming To City

Brig. R. W. Gorseline, director general of medical services for Canada, and Lt.-Col. J. Reid, district medical officer for M.D. 13, are expected in Edmonton Tuesday for a brief visit.

They are on the way to Jasper to the annual convention of the Canadian Medical association.

Lt.-Col. Brown, M.M., E.D., area commandant, stated the chief medical officer for Canada was expected to pay a brief visit to military headquarters here.
